JUDGE'S VERDICT

THE THREE
COMMANDMENTS OF GONZO
WEEKLY:

1. Art is as important as science and more important than money
2. There is life after (beyond and before) Pop Idol
3. Music can and sometimes does change the world

If you think those three ideas are stupid then you should probably give up reading this magazine now.
Otherwise... enjoy

Dear friends,

Welcome to another edition of the Gonzo Weekly magazine. As I think that I have mentioned quite a lot recently we are living in strange and disturbing times. But they are undeniably interesting ones.

The other day I had an email from a reader accusing me of being a “Communist weirdo”. I am certainly weird by the standards of most of the human race, but I am about as far from being a communist as it is possible to be. I believe that if we can’t actually remove our political leaders and live in a halcyon state of peace and love and here comes the sun, we should at least ridicule them at every slightest possibility. A communist, on the whole believes that our political leaders should be replaced by even more stern looking political leaders with peaked caps and big epaulettes.

The fact that my political philosophy seems to work has been highlighted on several occasions in the past few weeks, when on two occasions the UK Government has backed down in the face of popular opposition.

As it happens, both of these campaigns were ones with which I was involved, because they both involved animals. The first one, was briefly mentioned in the news pages of this magazine last week. The Government had been planning to introduce legislation to allow farmers to use a pack of dogs to hunt foxes which would have effectively made the hunting ban impossible to enforce.

However, due—largely—to the groundswell of public opinion against fox hunting in all its forms the government changed their minds a few weeks ago.

Then today it has been announced that “Plans to roll out the controversial badger cull pilots nationwide across England have been dropped by Owen Paterson after a damning independent report found the shoots were not effective or humane.

The two pilot culls, in Gloucestershire and Somerset, will continue with improvements recommended by the independent expert panel (IEP), including more and better-trained marksmen. But plans to start badger culls in 10 other areas have been abandoned, the environment secretary announced on Thursday, telling MPs he was taking the responsible approach.

"This disease is the most pressing animal health problem in the UK," Paterson said, noting that 26,600 cattle were slaughtered in 2013 and that the disease had cost taxpayers £500m in the past decade. But he accepted that "on effectiveness ... the culls did not make as much progress as we hoped." He said the cull operators had often faced a "disgraceful amount of intimidation from some of the more extreme protesters".

This isn't a complete victory, because the culls in Somerset and Gloucestershire are still going ahead, although I am sure that plans are afoot from the so-called "extreme elements" to disrupt them further and make them unworkable.

I am proud of the small part that I played in this campaign. I doubt whether the song and video that we made, featuring Graham dressed up as David Cameron and two glove puppet badgers had that much effect, although a certain socialist pop group got huffy with me accusing me of not taking parliament seriously, a charge to which I will gladly plead guilty.

But I did point out to Le Grande Fromage that the old English name for Badger was 'Brock'; something which he pointed out to the Captain of Spaceship Hawkwind a few days later. It wasn't long before the band threw themselves wholeheartedly into the campaign to stop the cull; a campaign that has largely succeeded.

So, in these degenerate days at least, people power does work. So I hope that I will be seeing you at the barricades!

IT'S A LEGAL MATTER BABY

A lot of the time the pictures that we include in this publication are unique to Gonzo Weekly, and used with the photographer's permission. However, this magazine is free, and at least at the moment only available online, and so in our opinion we are covered by a recent decision by the European Courts of Justice.

Websites can link to freely available content without the permission of the copyright holder, the European Court of Justice says. The court's decision came after a dispute in Sweden between journalists and a web company that had posted links on its site to online news articles.

A Swedish court had asked the EU court to consider whether this broke copyright law.

Some of the pictures in this magazine are hotlinked to other websites where they are freely available. It is our opinion that we are covered by this ruling. So there!

Of course if someone objects to our using their material we will be good fellows and take it down, unless (and this is a big unless) we feel that it is not in the public interest to comply. But normally we shall not stand on ceremony. If you want to read more about this decision go to:

Dramatis Personae

THE GONZO WEEKLY
all the gonzo news that's fit to print
Issue Seventy-one March 29th

This is quite simply the best magazine you will ever find that is edited by a mad bloke (and his small orange cat), and produced from a tumbledown potato shed on the outskirts of a tiny village that nobody's heard of in North Devon. The fact that it is published with Gonzo Multimedia - probably the grooviest record company in the known universe - is merely an added bonus.

NAMING THOSE RESPONSIBLE

This issue was put together by me and Captain Frunobulax the Magnificent, (who is, in case you didn't know, an insane orange kitten on the verge of adulthood) ably assisted by:

- Corinna Downes,
(Sub Editor, and my lovely wife)
- Graham Inglis,
(Columnist, Staff writer, Hawkwind nut)
- Bart Lancia,
(My favourite roving reporter)
- Thom the World Poet,
(Bard in residence)
- C.J.Stone,
(Columnist, commentator and all round good egg)
- Kev Rowland,
(Kiwi Reviewer)
- Lesley Madigan,
Photographer par excellence
- Douglas Harr,
(Staff writer, columnist)
- Jessica Taylor,
(PA and laughing at drunk pop stars)

- Dave McMann,
(He ain't nothing but a Newshound-dog)
- Orrin Hare,
(Sybarite and literary bon viveur)
- Mark Raines,
(Cartoonist)
- Davey Curtis,
(tales from the north)
- Jon Pertwee
(Pop Culture memorabilia)
- Dean Phillips
(The House Wally)
- Rob Ayling
(The Grande Fromage, of whom we are all in awe)
- and Peter McAdam
(McDada in residence)

This is the nearest that you are ever going to get to a posh weekend colour supplement from the Gonzo Daily team. Each week we shall go through the best bits of the week before, and if there aren't any we shall make some up, or simply make our excuses and leave (you can tell the editor once did contract work at the News of the World can't ya?)

This weekly magazine is free, and will remain so. It is published by Gonzo Multimedia in conjunction with CFZ Publications, or is it the other way round? We're actually not that sure. Contact us with bribes and free stuff:

so what's it all about, Alfie?

It is simple; my name is Jon and I'm the editor of the Gonzo Multimedia daily online bloggything, and wot what a long, strange trip it is gonna be...

I keep on thinking that I ought to have some sort of a mission statement in each issue, but it is more than a little difficult to do one.

Basically, (if you don't mind me sounding more like a wishy washy old hippy than my haircut in the photograph on the previous page would imply) I think that books and music are immensely important.

I look around and see that we are living in a world where the things that I think are important are valued less and less by society as a whole; a world where asinine gameshows and so-called reality TV (which is actually a complete oxymoron, but don't get me started) are of more importance to most people than anything of cultural or spiritual value.

I am also very disappointed by much of what the contemporary music press puts out, and I decided many years ago, that probably the only way I could read the things that I want to read, would be to publish them myself.

So this is what I have been doing for much of my life. I am also naive enough to think that music and art can change the world, and as the world is in desperate need of change, I am gonna do my best to help.

You will have certainly noticed that from this issue it has all changed. In fact there is no certainly about it. But if you haven't noticed I would like to know what you have been smoking for the last seven days, and can I have a large packet of it please.

Yes. It has indeed all changed. Basically I have been wanting to upgrade the visuals of the magazine for some time, but now the technology to do what I have wanted to do for yonks has finally become within our budget (i.e free) and we are going to give it a go.

If things don't work out we can still go back to the previous method of putting the magazine together, and we shall still be utilising those jolly nice fellows at MailChimp in order to send out the subscriber notifications.

In fact, now is an even better time than usual to subscribe because, not only is it FREE (yes, Oxford English Dictionary free, not yer usual publisher free which means that we sell all the mailing list emails that we garner to a company trying to flog Viagra and/or Double Glazing. No this is FREE as in Gratis. Not a Sausage. But I digress. Not only is it FREE but there will be some exclusive offers for folk who avail themselves of them, so make an old hippy a happy chappy and SUBSCRIBE TODAY

- NOT IN MY BACKYARD A source has said Cameron is of "one mind" with the backbenchers and party members who dislike windfarms in the UK, and that the party could propose planning restrictions, caps on output or lowered subsidies to limit the number of wind turbines in our country. The hope is, the source said, is to make it economically difficult for windfarms in the UK. How utterly foolish this collective of opponents is. We all know why people take a stand against wind turbines – they think they are an aesthetic blight on the countryside. But this is how it is: if we do not wean ourselves off non-renewable energy sources as soon as we possibly can, and fight for other nations to do the same, we will not have a countryside as we know it. READ ON
- RIDICULOUSLY UNFAIR An Austrian Muslim woman at the center of a rape case in Dubai has returned home with the help of Austria's foreign ministry after a storm of publicity and an online campaign on her behalf. The unidentified 29-year-old tourist told authorities she was raped in the underground garage of a luxury hotel in early December and was then jailed herself for several days. She reported the case to the Austrian embassy four days later, the foreign ministry said. According to the Gulf News, a local newspaper, the woman was facing possible charges of consuming alcohol and having consensual sex with a Yemeni man - who denied rape and said he had agreed to have sex with her for money. - 24 HOUR PARTY POLITICS I have always said that this magazine will never endorse a political candidate. Well, I am afraid that—like all politicians—I will have to go back on my word. Why? Because Bez is standing for parliament.

I will let The Guardian take over: "Happy Mondays star Bez has reportedly announced plans to stand for parliament at next year's general election. The wacky dancer said he hopes to become MP in his home town of Salford, and plans to run on a platform of redistributing wealth, tackling cancer and dementia, and an end to all war.

- The 49 year-old, best known for shaking the maracas with the 1980s band, told the Manchester Evening News he plans to "stir things up" in his bid to succeed former Labour cabinet minister Hazel Blears. He told the paper: "I've been saying we need a revolution, and there's no good shouting about it when you're not actually doing anything. A FEW MINUTES JOUSTING WITH JAKKO

As I mention in nearly every issue, I dislike Facebook intensely, but it is an undeniably groovy tool for the lazy journalist, or even the journalist who has a tiny budget, so prefers to do his or her news sleuthing online.

On wednesday evening, just before I telephoned Erik Norlander, I saw our old friend Jarkko Jakszyk online, so I grabbed him and asked him whether he has any news for us. He replied: "Err ELP's Brain Salad Surgery to be released this month (I think?)"

STEVE HACKETT BEGINS TOUR

As I was putting this issue of the magazine to bed, I found the following note, together with the above picture on Steve Hackett's Facebook page.

He writes:

The tour exploded into life at Washington DC's Lincoln Theatre. Now back at the extraordinary haunted Scottish Rites venue near Philly for two shows.

Cold outside but bubbling inside last night with Francis Dunnery guesting with us to thunderous applause, and tonight promises to be a real blinder! We're all excited to be here...

Warmest wishes to all,
Steve

Both Corinna and I would have liked to have seen him on this tour. I gave her a copy of the first of the Genesis Revisited CD for her birthday last year, and it has—unsurprisingly—become a firm favourite on the Downes hifi.

Well I may be a journalist but I can tell irony when I see it, but on this occasion I decided to ignore it. Jakko is always a busy fellow, but this is ridiculous even by his standards. So I typed back: "Blimey mate - and that is what you call "Not Much"! How are the rehearsals for KC going?"

"It's early days. I've been working with Robert", he continued. "Did a few days with Robert and Bill. Then Tony Levin came to stay and work at my place for a few days in February".

"Not much!! - I was being ironic as I'm sure you realise" he typed. "Of course I realise", I replied. "Good luck with it all".

"Thanks" he typed. "I may well need it!!!!"

Jakko is a real polymath and I am always amazed at the sheer level of work he manages to get under his belt. I look forward to chatting to him again soon...

ACID MOTHERS TEMPLE ARE STILL RIDICULOUSLY BUSY

This Oriental psychedelic collective have a workload which really puts many of the rest of us to shame. They are insanely busy, and it seems that every week I am writing about a new project for them.

The above artwork is apparently the T Shirt artwork for an item of apparel which will be available at all the gigs on the forthcoming "Astrorgasm From The Inner Temple Tour" - the Acid Mothers Temple & The Melting Paraiso U.F.O. US & Canadian tour 2014! The drawing by Kawabata Makoto.

I go to America every few years, and invariably get stopped and questioned quite vigorously by the Immigration Department. I strongly suspect that this is because I have written several books that are scathing about various successive American governments. (By the way, before you start accusing me of bias, I am equally scathing, if not more so, about our own). On my last visit the powers of law and boredom were not spectacularly impressed that my luggage consisted of various video cameras, butterfly nets and test tubes and a handful of anarchist T Shirts, and took my explanation that I was visiting Texas to investigate the Blue Dog of Elmendorf very scathingly indeed.

If I can be perceived as a threat to truth, justice and the American Way, I hate to think what those jolly nice folk at immigration, will think of a posse of Japanese gentlemen engaged on the "Astrorgasm From The Inner Temple Tour"

It is conundra like this that keep me happy through the day. Above is the poster for the band's annual festival in Japan which, apparently is taking place next week. I have only got into the band in the past few weeks.

I had heard of them, of course, for well over a decade, but never engaged with them properly until recently. Their arcane brand of organic psychedelia is a wonderful soundtrack to the strange and often disturbing times in which we are living.

Do yourself a favour and check them out at Gonzo.

THIS LOT AIN'T GOING TO DISAPPEAR IN SMOKE, OR AT LEAST I BLOODY WELL HOPE NOT.

Over the last week or so I have spent quite a lot of time chatting to Craig High, frontman, singer and sax dude with Alan Davey's magnificent band The Psychedelic Warlords. It really does seem that he and I are singing from the same socio-political hymnsheet.

Every couple of days he sends me something. Here, taken almost at random is a selection of the goodies that he has sent me over the past few days. Regular readers will, I hope, remember that last week we ran a piece about the forthcoming project by The Psychedelic Warlords which will see them putting an end to singing Hawkwind material as their main oeuvre, and collaborating with Michael Moorcock on a new project. This naturally led on to me discussing Moorcock's universe with him, which in turn led on to this:

"A bunch of us did a load of Cornelius stories that he gave us an intro for regarding the cover which had Bob Calvert on it. Although the paperback was banned {always flattering when that happens} you can still read it on mine and my partner's web site. It might be to your taste.... <http://highpanch.org.uk/fluxus/index.htm>"

The band are currently rehearsing for their new tour which is very imminent. The last I heard from Craig was the other day when he wrote:

I'm off to Alan's tomorrow morning. Journey of 300 miles so I'm leaving early. Once at his I shall resume FB correspondence amid rehearsals and the first leg of our tour. I may have crashed by the time you read this so apologies for any tardy response times.

I am very much enjoying my new relationship with Craig, and look forward to seeing The Psychedelic Warlords at some point in the next few months. In the meantime check out Alan Davey at Gonzo...

KEITH LEVENE'S COMMERCIAL ZONE INITIATIVE REACHES 27% PERCENT OF TARGET ON INDIEGOGO

For immediate release – April 2, 2014: Clash/Public Image Ltd. founding member, Keith Levene’s “Commercial Zone 2014” initiative on Indiegogo has reached 27% of its targeted financial objective.

The crowdfunding campaign for Levene’s Commercial Zone release which is referred to as the “post punk opus” by L.A. Record Magazine, is scheduled to end on April 28, 2014. In 1982-1983, Levene composed what was intended to be PiL’s fourth album, the Commercial Zone. However, lack of support and creative differences over that album led Levene to leave PiL and abandon the project in the Spring of 1983.

“Finally producing the Commercial Zone my way will allow me to finish important unfinished business,” explains Levene. “I know there’s been a gap in time of thirty years.”

“CZ2014 is very special to me. It contains original material and has the benefit of 30 years of my work. So it’s not another tired, old, re-release of stuff that’s been out since 1978 or 1981. It’s fresh. I’ve had time to reflect. So yeah, it’s better,” he states.

A 30 page picture book preview of original artwork, photos, and words from Levene’s forthcoming book “Diary” will accompany Commercial Zone 2014.

Amongst other campaign offerings are $300.00 USD “producer” role pledges, of which two have been taken by backers.

A RARE UK APPEARANCE FROM ONE OF EUROPE'S FAVOURITE PROG-ROCK BANDS

THROUGHOUT THE WEEKEND THERE WILL BE A BELGIAN THEMED MENU AND A VAST RANGE OF BELGIAN BEERS TO INDULGE IN. THIS IS A WEEKEND NOT TO BE MISSED!

A WEIRD FEW DAYS ON PLANET GALAHAD

The feat of le poisson d'Avril, as our French cousins call it, has always been one of my favourite times of the year, because it is the one day when my idiotically childish sense of humour can be given full reign.

So when the following post appeared on Galahad's Facebook Page I initially took it cum grano salis:

Records Store Day April 19th is shaping up to be another Cracker! We can now announce members of the Progtastic Galahad will be performing live set as 'Galahad Stripped'

I had horrible visions of Stu et al doing for prog rock what various Hollywood actresses do for PETA, and the thought quite put me off my breakfast.

But soon it transpired that this was actually true, but that—hopefully—the band will be keeping their kit on.

Two days later, however, Stu posted this:

I have to say I'm a little bored with the whole rock and roll thing, it's just too mundane and the excitement levels are negligible these days, all the travelling, never knowing quite where you are going to end up next, all those paid for flights and hotels, it's just so predictable and dull! I guess I'm just too old for this stuff these days thus I've decided to spend more time getting involved with my beloved Accountancy projects, so much more fun and the exhilaration levels are second to none when you get that Balance Sheet to finally balance, it's an amazing feeling. You try and explain it to a musician and they just don't get it, yep, Accountancy is the way forward..

Hmmmm. I wonder whether he means it this time. I hope not, because Galahad are one of the few prog metal acts that I really do like a lot. Check 'em out at Gonzo...

OPEN THE VAULTS THE PROMISE

FULFIL A PROMISE TO THE DALAI LAMA: transform a Buddhist Film archive into a free online learning resource, for the benefit of all.

Making the insights of Buddhist Wisdom available to ALL.

In 1985 The Dalai Lama asked as a matter of urgency that The Meridian Trust preserve Tibetan culture at a time when its very existence was threatened. Since then we have created an archive of over 2,500 hours of footage: these recordings collectively make one of the largest and most authentic resources of Tibetan Buddhist film in the world.

With developments in digital technology there is now the potential to make our work of the last 29 years instantly accessible for the benefit of all, thereby helping Buddhist thought develop in cultures and countries well beyond those of its origin. After many years of recording, preserving and careful curating we are finally in a position to 'Open the Vaults'.

Our goal is to build a NEW website through which this rare film archive can be shared over the Internet, for free, for the benefit of all. Here authentic Buddhist teachings and culture can be accessed at the click of a button.

By Opening the Vaults Together we can fulfill our promise to The Dalai Lama, giving Tibetan's access to their cultural heritage; giving back to those who have lost so much. We hope to develop a website that will benefit people from all walks of life, who wish to enrich their lives through a deeper knowledge of Buddhist wisdom.

The goal of the project is to facilitate access, for present and future generations; to make authentic sources of learning on Buddhist philosophy, culture, art and related practice, and provide opportunities for the culture to evolve anew.

HOW?

Develop a New Website: Meridian Trust will work with web designers and developers, Piction Media and Designed2Perform who (using Open Source technologies) will develop a new website with film-streaming and search capabilities onto which the Trust will upload the Archive and its current Buddhist filming projects.

Navigation: A major aspect of usability of the website is the need for people to be able to find what they want, and find it quickly. Due to the large amount of video content, the Trust will present clear, consistent, well-ordered Navigation and Sub-Navigation including Search facilities. The site will have a search engine to allow users to find videos in the archive by categories such as Teacher, Buddhist teachings, Art, Rituals, Initiations, Political, Documentaries, Conference, Interviews, Public Talks, Tibetan Culture and Western Buddhism.

Security: The website's privacy options will make it easy to make the videos public, private or password protected. The Trust will have full control of who can see them, for some content is restricted and only viewable by people who have had certain teachings or initiations. Content will be editable and publishable by Meridian staff and security will be in place for all elements of the site.

Device Support/ Mobile Playback: The website will be supported by all desktop computers, mobile devices such as iPad and Android tablets and smartphones.

Social Media Integration: The website will be integrated with social media sites such as Facebook and Twitter to help the Trust reach its target audience and develop awareness and interest.

A Buddhist Film Archive (Est 1985)

We are a charity dedicated to the preservation and dissemination of Tibetan Buddhist thought, culture and artistic heritage. Our archive holds over 2,500 hours of footage, focusing primarily on the endangered traditions of Tibet. Footage focuses mainly on teachings and public talks given by leading Buddhist teachers, especially the Dalai Lama, our patron.

We believe that Tibetan cultural heritage, with its profound message of Buddhism, has the potential to not only benefit Tibetans but also the whole of humankind with its globally relevant values of non-violence, the appreciation of interdependence, the development of compassion, respect for the environment and the cultivation of creative approaches to adversity

Our goal is to 'Open the Vault': to facilitate access, for present and future generations to authentic sources of learning on Buddhist philosophy, culture, art and related practice.

With your support we will build a NEW website through which this rare film archive can be shared over the Internet, for free, for the benefit of all. Here authentic Buddhist teachings and culture can be accessed at the click of a button.

Peculiar News of the Week

Howard fumes:
'I'm going to sue'

SEXCRUTIATING:
Howard's romp
with pasty ended in agony

They say that some people will say anything to get into the papers, but this takes the biscuit. "THERE can be no finer a treat than tucking into a piping hot Gregg's chicken bake pasty in one of Britain's peeling and windswept town centres. But oddball Howard Russell took his admiration for the flakypastry snack to an extreme and, some would say, warped new level. For the 32-year-old sales manager developed a sexual fetish for having SEX with the piping-hot pasties."

He injured himself and now plans legal action. However, the fact that this story appeared in the Sunday Sport means that it should, perhaps, be taken cum grano salis. Abut then again that could be said of all savoury patisserie.

WEB RADIO

Strange Fruit, Miskin's Radio's home of alternative, off-the-wall and otherwise generally strange sounds is looking for a co-presenter. This is not a paid job, but would give the lucky individual the chance to present two hour shows of music generally ignored by radio, and broadcast them twice a month to be heard by Miskin Radio's audience online and then archived on Gonzo Multimedia's website, where their audience would devour them. Radio experience would be useful, but isn't necessary. The ideal candidate would be able to come to our Dartford studios, be trained and begin work when ready.

Alternatively, anyone capable of self-producing and Dropboxing shows will be considered. Fame and wealth are unlikely but the chance to indulge your most maverick musical tastes knows few limits in this job. In the first instance email Neil Nixon, nlnxn@aol.com to express an interest. Also check out our shows on Gonzo Multimedia's web radio page and Miskin Radio's own site – www.miskinradio.co.uk

Strange Fruit presenter Neil Nixon is currently working on a book about rare albums for Gonzo Multimedia.

Musician Frankie Knuckles, known as the Godfather of House music, has died unexpectedly, it has been announced.

A pioneer of house - the sparse, electronic dance music that emerged from Chicago in the 1980s - Knuckles was just 59.

He was known for remixing tracks by Michael Jackson and Whitney Houston, as well as his own songs, such as Your Love and The Whistle Song.

His death was confirmed by fellow DJ David Morales on Twitter.

Artist: Mick Abrahams
Title: Mick's Back
Cat No. HST182CD
Label: Gonzo

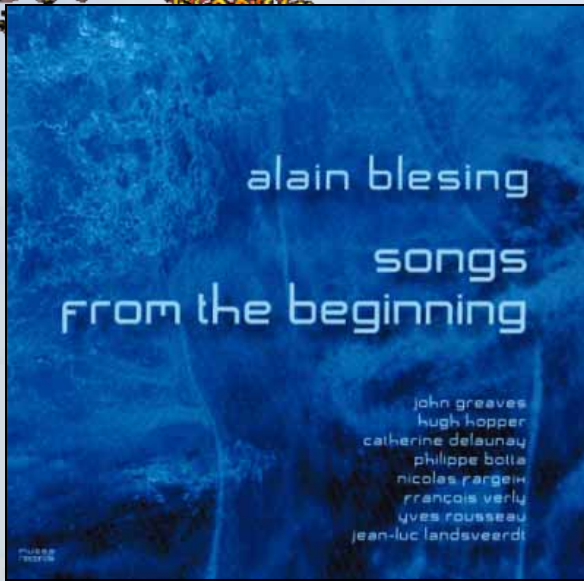

An anonymous internet reviewer called only Dave42 writes: "'Mick's Back' is Mick Abraham's third solo album after coming out of retirement. It may not be quite up to the level of his 1991 album, 'All Said and Done', but it isn't far off. Released in July of 1996, this album features over 50 minutes of blues, with Mick playing the guitar better than ever. Mick is backed by The Norman Beaker Band, and the combination is dynamic. My personal favorites on this CD are 'The Rivers Invitation', 'Bad Feeling', 'Time to Love', 'Long Grey Mare', and 'Yolanda', but all the selections are well worth a listen.

Artist: Clearlight
Title: Forever Blowing Bubbles
Cat No. HST209CD
Label: Gonzo

Forever Blowing Bubbles is a progressive rock album by Clearlight, released in 1975 on Virgin Records in the UK. It is their first album to use this artist name, but is regarded as their third album. Following the success of Clearlight Symphony, Delired Cameleon Family changed their name to Clearlight and returned to the Manor studio in England to record a second album for Virgin. It covers many contrasting genres including psychedelic, new age, folk, rock and jazz fusion jamming, and the closing track of abstract electronic music experimentation. Only two songs have vocals, and are sung in French.

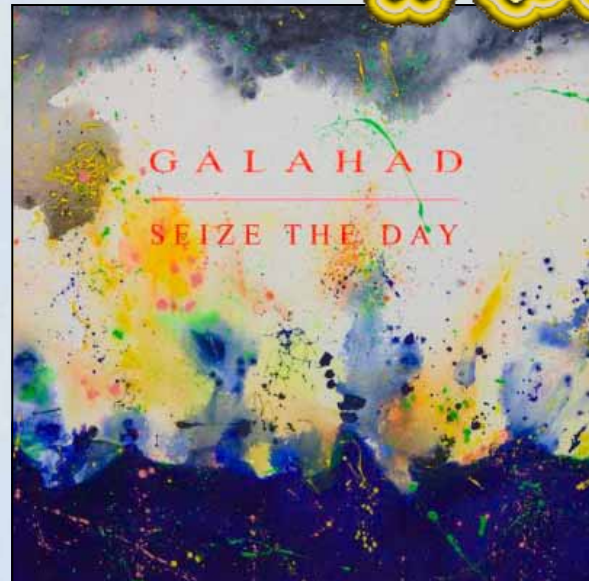

Artist: John Greaves, Hugh Hopper, Alain Blesing
Title: Songs From The Beginning
Cat No. FGBG4655.AR
Label: Musea

Alain Blesing is a French guitar player, known for having been part of the legendary progressive/zeuhl rock band Eskaton, who are considered to be one of the most gifted disciples of Magma. From the late Seventies, he extended his capacities by studying musicology, then in discovering jazz music. With the Turkish female singer Senem Diyici, he got involved in the universe of world-music.

Now firmly established on the French scene, Alain Blesing returns to his roots and publishes an album revisiting 1970s progressive rock classics by King Crimson, Led Zeppelin, Soft Machine, Henry Cow and Hatfield and the North among others.

"Songs From The Beginning" presents legendary songs such as "Slightly All The Time" (Soft Machine), "Beautiful As The Moon" (Henry Cow), "California" (Led Zeppelin), "Mumps" (Hatfield and the North), "1983" (Jimi Hendrix), "Behind Blue Eyes" (The Who) and "Fracture" (King Crimson).

His reputation attracted big names like John Greaves and Hugh Hopper, respectively taking the singing and bass duties here. At the end, you get an opus both masterfully performed and intimately personal, revisiting all of Alain Blesings musical aspects.

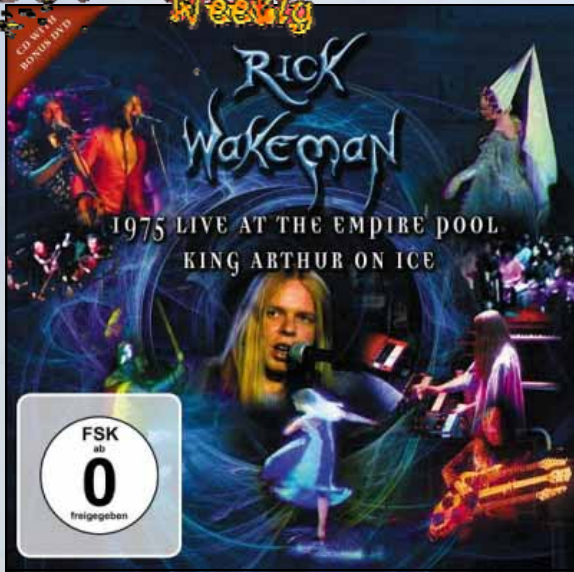

Artist: Galahad
Title: Seize The Day
Cat No. GHEP1
Label: Avalon

Following on from the release of two critically acclaimed full length albums in 2012 (Battle Scars and Beyond the Realms of Euphoria), Galahad are back again with an EP 'Seize the Day', the first of several which will be released during the coming year. 'Seize the Day' has been edited, tweaked and re-mixed by the band and Karl Groom and makes a perfect single, in our opinion of course! It will be available as a download from the band's website as well from the usual digital on-line platforms such as I-tunes, CD Baby, Amazon etc.

It will be available in physical form as a limited edition CD EP which will also contain the full re-mixed album version as well as a couple of other re-recorded and re-worked Galahad songs: '21st Century Painted Lady' is based upon 'Painted Lady' which was one of the first Galahad songs ever written and was first recorded in the mid 1980's but has now been given a major overhaul and now includes a second verse which should have but didn't appear on the original version!

'Bug Eye', originally from the 1998 album 'Following Ghosts' has also been re-worked and brought up to date for 2013. A live version of the original arrangement is also included on the EP. 'Seize the Day' should appeal to existing fans of the band as well as those who are intrigued and interested in the band but have yet to dip their toes in to the murky world of Galahad music.

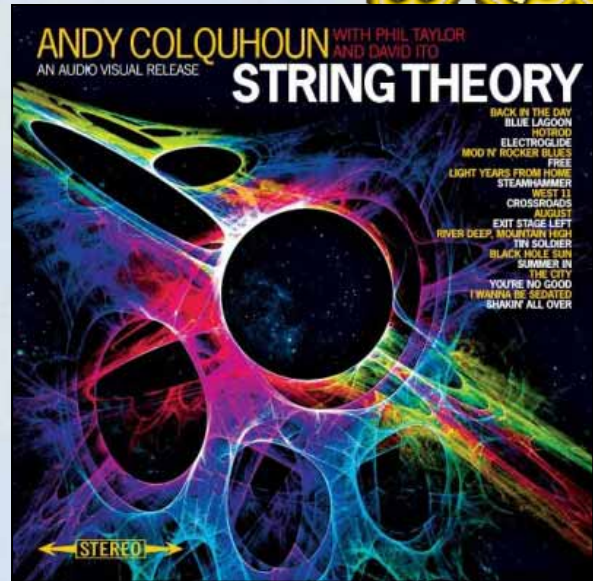

Artist: Rick Wakeman
Title: Live At The Empire Pool
Cat No. RICK001CD
Label: Rick Wakeman

Rick writes: There were just three performances of King Arthur on Ice and it was “crucified” by most of the media before it had even had its opening night! Amazingly though, the demand from the press and media for tickets was unprecedented and which was met with a total refusal to all who had “pre-reviewed” the event

It was undoubtedly for me, a high point of my musical career. I was pleased with the music and to this day feel that the main theme is probably the best I have written and will be hard to surpass. The shows were just great fun and were put on with virtually no outside assistance as very few people believed in it and indeed wanted it to happen. Numerous people, who will remain nameless, tried in vain to get me to do a basic show at the Royal Albert Hall and to “forget all this nonsense about an ice show”!

Ice skating was not popular back in 1975 and so I enlisted the help of some of the world’s greatest skaters from all over the world To the best of my knowledge it was also the first time a PA of that size had been “hung” in a venue the size of Wembley Arena. I shipped in a Clair Brothers system from America as there was nothing in the UK that could handle the task. Thanks to people like Tony Burdfield at A&M Records, my band, the conductor David Measham and the English Chamber Choir, and the foresight of Alan Yentob, who filmed much of the show for the BBC, the memory still lives on. ...And my thoughts now? I’d just love to do it one more time!!!

Artist: Andy Colquhoun
Title: String Theory
Cat No. HST227CD
Label: Gonzo

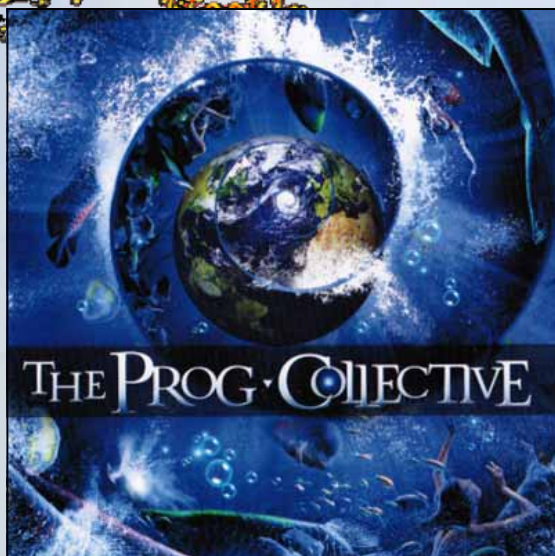

Andy Colquhoun is a guitarist with a peerless pedigree. He first came to the notice of the music press when in 1977 his band Warsaw Pakt recorded an album (Needle Time) that was in the shops 24 hours after the first note was recorded (viz the session ended at 10 p.m. on Saturday 26 November 1977 and the album was ready to be sold by 7a.m. on Sunday 27 November 1977.).

The band was trying to make a point about technology in doing this, and the album sleeve was a 12" square brown bag with stickers and rubber stamping to display the band name and album title. After Warsaw Pakt, he joined Brian James' Tanz Der Youth, (described as the world’s first hippy punks) subsequently moved on to the band The Pink Fairies, and then a band with ex-MC5 guitarist Wayne Kramer.

For the best part of thirty years he was songwriting partner and collaborator with the legendary Mick Farren; a partnership which only ended with Mick’s sad death in July 2013.

He told me about this album:

“It’s got twelve original tunes on it that I wrote, and I originally recorded those in 2010. And then there’s been an addition of another seven tracks that are all covers of songs that I like, and like playing. This is an instrumental album.”

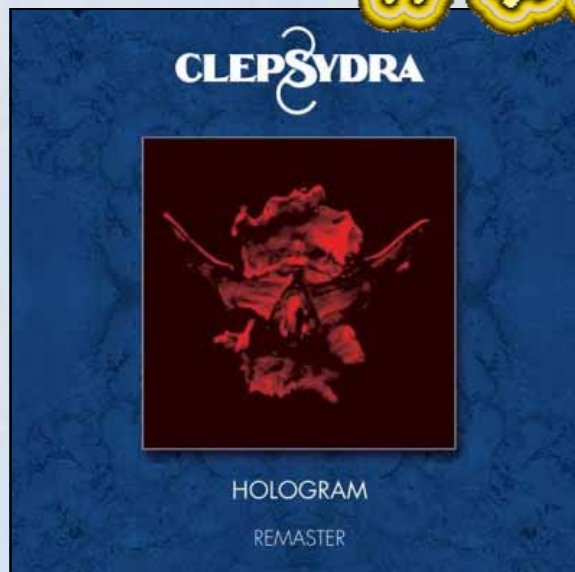

Artist: Rick Wakeman, Alan Parsons, John Wetton, Chris Squire, Steve Hillage and others
Title: The Prog Collective
Cat No. FGBG4918
Label: Musea

Musician, producer and former Yes member Billy Sherwood has put together what he's dubbed "the biggest super group of progressive rock players ever assembled," to form The Prog Collective.

The group's self-titled album features John Wetton (Asia), Tony Levin (King Crimson), Jerry Goodman (Mahavishnu Orchestra), Richard Page (Mr. Mister), Geoff Downes (Yes/Asia), Alan Parsons (Alan Parsons Project), Chris Squire (Yes), Rick Wakeman (Yes), Gary Green (Gentle Giant), Annie Haslam (Renaissance), Steve Hillage (Gong), John Wesley (Porcupine Tree), Tony Kaye (Yes), Colin Moulding (XTC) and others.

Billy Sherwood writes: 'The idea of assembling a collection of amazing artists from the progressive rock genre all on one record was an especially exciting concept to me. Inspired, I began writing and recording the 7 songs that would become this album. I then sent those recordings out to some of my friends and musical heroes from bands like King Crimson, XTC, Asia, Gentle Giant, and of course my former band Yes. Soon I started receiving vocal tracks and guitar and keyboard overdubs from studios all over the world, which I then mixed at my recording studio in Los Angeles. Despite the distances in geography, however, the feeling of the entire production is one of musical and spiritual unity - The Prog Collective!'

The biggest super group of Progressive Rock players ever assembled!

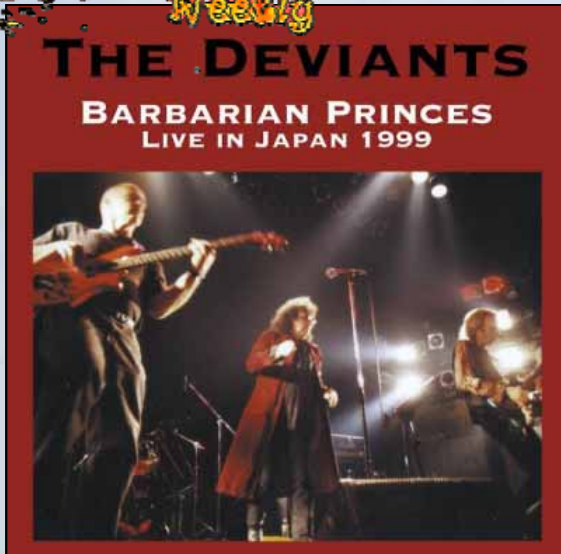

Artist: Clepsydra
Title: Hologram
Cat No. GLR114CD
Label: GLR114CD

Clepsydra is a Swiss neo-progressive band that was formed in 1990 by Aluisio Maggini (vocals), Lele Hofmann (guitars), Philip Hubert (keyboards), Andy Thommen (bass) and Pietro Duca (drums).

In 1991 Clepsydra released their first album 'Hologram', which was followed by the EP 'Fly Man' in 1993. Clepsydra then signed to InsideOut, who released their second album 'More Grains of Sand' in 1994. This CD included the song "Moonshine on Heights", which by many is regarded as neo-prog classic. 1994 also saw them performing two songs on national Swiss TV, a rare occurrence for a progressive rock band at that time.

The one thing I want to know is how come an old prog-head like me had never heard of Clepsydra? I knew Andy Thommen, of course, because of his work with Zenit; their album The Chandrasekr Incident was one of my favourites in 2012, and following my first conversation with Andy he sent me the other Zenit albums, which I enjoyed immensely.

But, last night, after my first aborted attempt at telephoning Switzerland, Andy was kind enough to send me the mp3 of the four Clepsydra albums. I had a joyous experience today, listening to them in full, back to back as I went about my daily business. Seldom have I been so impressed.

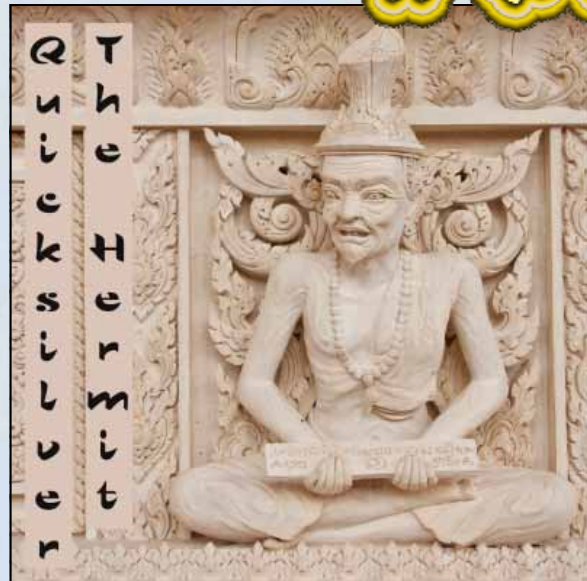

Artist: The Deviants
Title: Barbarian Princes Live in Japan 1999
Cat No. HST187CD
Label: Gonzo

The Social Deviants were founded by singer/writer Mick Farren (born Michael Anthony Farren, 3 September 1943, in Gloucester, Gloucestershire) in 1967 out of the Ladbroke Grove UK Underground community, featuring Pete Munro on bass; Clive Muldoon on guitar, Mike Robinson on guitar and Russell Hunter on drums (born Barry Russell Hunter, 26 April 1946, in Woking, Surrey).

The band shortened their name to "The Deviants" after Munro and Muldoon left and were replaced by Sid Bishop on guitar (born Ian Bishop, 17 December 1946, Balham, South West London) and Cord Rees on bass.

With the financial backing of Nigel Samuel, the 21-year-old son of a millionaire, whom Farren had befriended, the group independently recorded their debut album Ptooff!, selling copies through the UK Underground press before it was picked up by Decca Records.

At the end of the 1970s Farren again concentrated on his writing and relocated to New York. He would resurrect The Deviants name for occasional live performances, such as these shows recorded in Japan with long-time friend and collaborator Andy Colquhoun and featuring Wayne Kramer from the MC5's backing band.

Artist: Quicksilver Messenger Service
Title: The Hermit
Cat No. HST233CD
Label: Gonzo

Beverly Paterson writes:

“Over the years, the band has reunited off and on, and the current incarnation includes original member Gary Duncan on guitar, vocals, bass and keyboards, along with John Bird on guitar, Jimmy Guyette on bass, Tony Menjuar on percussion, and former Sly and the Family Stone drummer Greg Errico. Slimming their name down to simply Quicksilver, the band still does the jam thing and they do it mighty well.

Tuned to a funky frequency, “Boo-Hooiin” shudders and shakes with style and substance, where tracks like “Nica’s Dream” and “Samba Triste/Green Dolphin Street” swing and swagger with jiving jazz rhythms. Strumming a wicked acoustic guitar, Jorge Santana stages a guest appearance on the blissful, breezy Latin fragranced “Cancion Para Dios,” while “Selling Miss Murphy,” in certain parts, particularly in the beginning and in the middle of the cut, pinches notions from the kind of creepy, crawly moody measures occasionally practiced by Led Zeppelin. Ablaze with nimble fretwork, stimulating keyboard passages, and dynamic drum patterns, The Hermit exhibits how incredibly intact and incisive Quicksilver’s chops are. The band trades and shares tasty licks with effortless ease, their timing is impeccable, and the energy is positive. Bluesy undercurrents collide in harmony with jazzy arrangements and rocking beats, culminating in a marvelous melting pot of various sonic accessories.”

Happy Trails dudes.

Artist: Captain Beefheart
Title: Harpo's Detroit Dec 11th 1980
Cat No. GZO104CD
Label: Gonzo

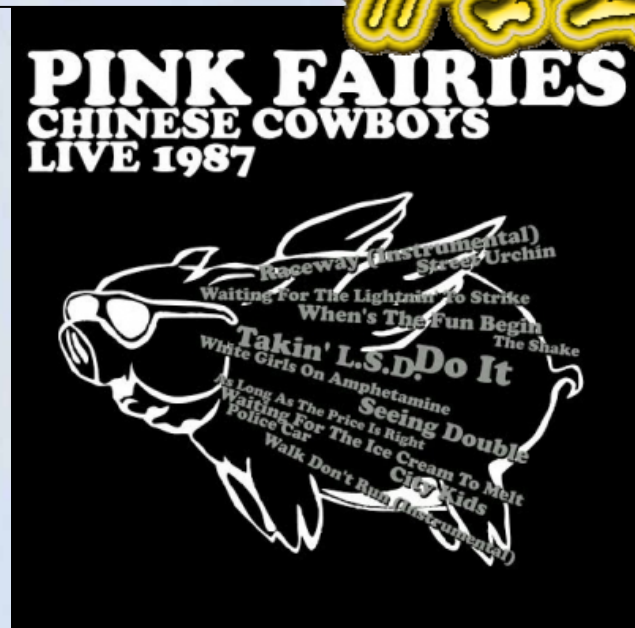

Don Van Vliet (born Don Glen Vliet; January 15, 1941 – December 17, 2010) was an American musician, singer-songwriter, artist and poet known by the stage name Captain Beefheart.

His musical work was conducted with a rotating ensemble of musicians called the Magic Band (1965–1982), with whom he recorded 13 studio albums. Noted for his powerful singing voice with its wide range, Van Vliet also played the harmonica, saxophone and numerous other wind instruments. His music blended rock, blues and psychedelia with avant-garde and contemporary experimental composition.

Van Vliet has been described as ‘...one of modern music's true innovators’ with ‘...a singular body of work virtually unrivalled in its daring and fluid creativity.’ Although he achieved little commercial or mainstream critical success, he sustained a cult following as a ‘highly significant’ and ‘incalculable’ influence on an array of New Wave, punk, post-punk, experimental and alternative rock musicians.

Known for his enigmatic personality and relationship with the public, Van Vliet made few public appearances after his retirement from music (and from his Beefheart persona) in 1982.

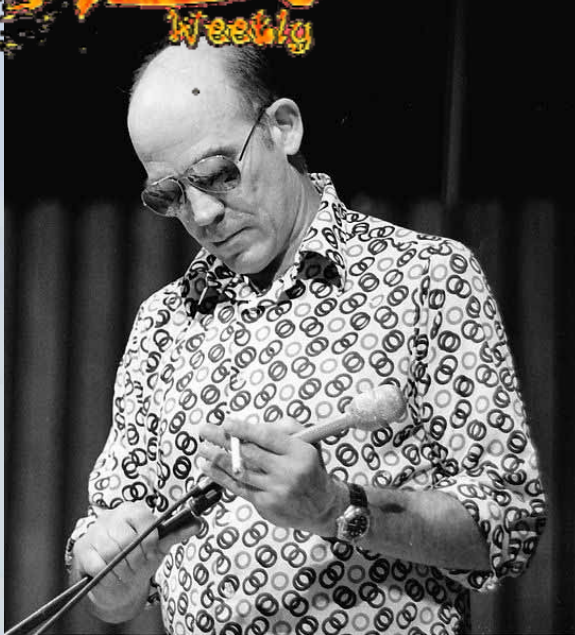

This extraordinary record catches the Captain at his best; live on stage in 1980 during the tour for ‘Doc at the Radar Station’

Artist: Pink Fairies
Title: Chinese Cowboys Live 1987
Cat No. HST239CD
Label: Gonzo

Mike Reed writes: "Chinese Cowboys is an archive, unreleased live CD title that was recorded at two 1987 gigs the band had played in support of their '87 comeback album, Kill 'Em and Eat 'Em. These two shows took place at Leeds and at the Long Marston Speedway. Good sound quality. On a ten scale I give it a 9 / 9+. Not perfect but awfully darn nice to listen to as well as fully take in. Glad to see the Fairies decided to play material from their first three albums, like '71's Neverneverland. There's drummer Twink stepping out for a rousing performance of "Do It". Then off '72's What A Bunch Of Sweeties there are the band's two drummers, Twink and Russell Hunter totally cutting loose on the ten minute "Walk Don't Run". Also, you get from '73's Kings Of Oblivion the stunning instrumental "Raceway", "Street Urchin" and "City Kids". One lesser known track here that I was surprised to hear was off the Previously Unreleased EP, the rocking "Waiting For The Lightning To Strike". From the afore mentioned Kill 'Em and Eat 'Em album (never thought I'd hear live versions of these tunes) the guys serve up "Takin' LSD", "White Girls On Amphetamine", "Seeing Double" and the jamming "Waiting For The Ice Cream To Melt". Whew! What a trip.

My only regret is I wasn't there. Simply a fun CD to listen to. This will stay in my 'current listening stack for quite some time. I also dug "The Snake", with its wicked lyrics, but I wasn't able to find out where this tune originally came from. Not completely sure but I think it might've been a 45 single when it first came out. If you're a Pink Fairies fan you need to get yourself a copy of this CD."

WHO GONZO? WHY GONZO? WHAT GONZO?

What? You don't know who Hunter Thompson is/was/might have been/will be? Without Hunter Thompson there would be no Gonzo Multimedia. It would have been completely different and that would have been an unforgivable pity. So here is:

- A potted history of his life and works
- Rob Ayling explains why he called his company 'Gonzo'

C.J.Stone suggested that as well as explaining Gonzo to those wot don't understand, we should do a weekly quote from the great man himself. So here goes:

“The TV business is uglier than most things. It is normally perceived as some kind of cruel and shallow money trench through the heart of the journalism industry, a long plastic hallway where thieves and pimps run free and good men die like dogs, for no good reason”.

BACK ISSUE BONANZA

This is all very exciting and things are changing very rapidly. There is now a dedicated website at www.gonzoweekly.com. At the moment it is extremely skeletal, but it will be titivated and enhanced and augmented with other stuff over the next few months.

In my defence, I have never pretended to be any sort of web designer, and I have never worked out how to use Dreamweaver or any of those clever things, and I don't understand anything but basic raw htm.

But it does the biz as Graham would say, and it contains links to all sixty-nine back issues. I will be guided by you, the readership as to what else should be on the magazine's website. There will also be special things there which are only available to subscribers, which as the subscription costs now't, is—I think—a reasonably good deal.

Somewhere along the line I will call upon members of my ever expanding Robot Army of the Undead and get someone to transfer all the back issues from the Mailchimp format in which they were originally composed, to this swish new page turney flip book thingy. But it ain't gonna happen any time soon because - believe it or not - the rigours of putting out a 70 page magazine every seven days with a team of volunteers, and a budget of twenty five quid, are quite considerable.

But it will happen....in the fullness of time...

EXCLUSIVE JUDGE SMITH INTERVIEW

Last week we had a very welcome visitor here; our old mate Judge Smith, songwriter, singer, author and all round good egg. He came down to work on his second book with CFZ Press; the sequel to The Universe Next Door which we published last year.

These are probably the most erudite non-religious books on the subject of life after death that I have ever read. It is an honour and a privilege to be working with him.

However, in the evenings Corrina surpassed herself with tasty vegetarian dishes and I broke out the wine bottles.

Judge told us so many remarkable stories about his extraordinary career that we decided we really had to share them with you, so we pointed a video camera in his general direction, asked him questions about his early days in Van der Graaf Generator, and attending the same gallery show where John met Yoko..

Although I have been listening to the band for about thirty five years, ever since I saw them playing at Exeter University in the autumn of 1977 I have never known very much about them at all, and I found out from talking to Judge that an awful lot of what has been written about them on the Internet is simply wrong. I felt a little churlish asking Judge about things that had happened so long ago, and ignoring his fine solo career. But Judge is a sweetie pie and great fun to have around, and didn't seem to mind at all.

Sadly I didn't have the camera on when he told possibly the funniest rock and roll war story of the evening involving the late Graham Bond, and another involving Jimi Hendrix, but—no doubt—when he comes down again next time I shall be able to bribe him with wine and point a camera at him again...

EXCLUSIVE ERIK NORLANDER INTERVIEW

Erik Norlander is an extraordinarily talented musician and composer. I have been following his career for the last couple of years ever since Gonzo released his two Galactic Collective DVD sets. I interviewed him first a couple of years ago, and within minutes realised here was a chap with whom I felt an extraordinary affinity with. We have similar tastes in music, curry and books, and whenever we talk the conversation ends up going off onto arcane tangents that no body could have foreseen.

He has just resurrected his band The Rocket Scientists who have just released an extraordinary new record called Supernatural Highways. He was kind enough to send me a copy, and it arrived on the day that some of the prophets of gloom were predicting that unusual activity amongst the wildlife at Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming meant that the long dormant super volcano situated beneath the park was about to erupt for the first time in seventy thousand years.

The projected result of this will be catastrophic for the future of mankind, and will solve the problems of global warming and human over-population at a stroke, but not in a good way.

Back in the day, Duran Duran claimed that they wanted to be the band to dance to when the bomb dropped. After listening to the intense, melodic, and cinematic sounds on Supernatural Highways, especially the title track, (ok it's not a title track but you know that I mean) I quipped to Erik that The Rocket Scientists were the band to listen to as we watch the end of western civilization as we know it.

Listen to our conversation here.

What Does The Hypostasis of the Archons Mean? Gnosticism, The Roman Empire and the Myth of Christ

*Distracted from distraction by distraction
Filled with fancies and empty of meaning
Tumid apathy with no concentration
Men and bits of paper, whirled by the cold wind
That blows before and after time.*

TS Eliot, Burnt Norton from The Four Quartets.

God of the blind

I first came across the Hypostasis of the Archons one rainy day in mid December 2005. I'd been sitting around nursing a hangover all day. It was grey and wet and miserable out there in the world, and I didn't feel like going out. Later I would be going to watch the Christmas lights turning-on ceremony in our town. Meanwhile I'd been surfing the internet, looking for obscure political and religious texts, mainly about the various sects that exist in the region around Iraq. It's something I was thinking at the time. Why did the American invade Iraq? Yes, because of the oil, but also – so I thought – because Iraq contains the key to an understanding of the origins of Christianity.

There are several Christian sects in Iraq. There are Chaldean, Assyrian and Syriac communities, who all practice variations on traditional Christian rites. Some of them do so in Aramaic, the language of Jesus himself, while several so-called heretical sects also find their home in Iraq. Plus there are two other religious groups, the Yazidis in the North, and the Mandaeans in the South, who are also clearly from the Judeo-Christian line. This is obviously aside from the two main Islamic sects which make up the majority of the population: the Sunni and the Shi'ites. The Mandaeans are particularly interesting as they are followers of John the Baptist, practicing daily baptism as part of their rite. They are also a Gnostic sect - "Manda" means "knowledge" - which casts a revealing light on the history of Christianity. If John the Baptist was a Gnostic then that must mean that Gnosticism precedes Orthodoxy, something that traditional Christians would be loath to admit.

It was just before I was due to go out that I found the Hypostasis of the Archons. I'm not sure what query I'd put into my search engine to come up with this particular piece of writing. I already knew some of the Gnostic texts, and had been intrigued and fascinated by them for years. I'd never read this one before, but there was something about it which seemed familiar somehow, and which seared into me from the very first words.

Here are the opening lines:

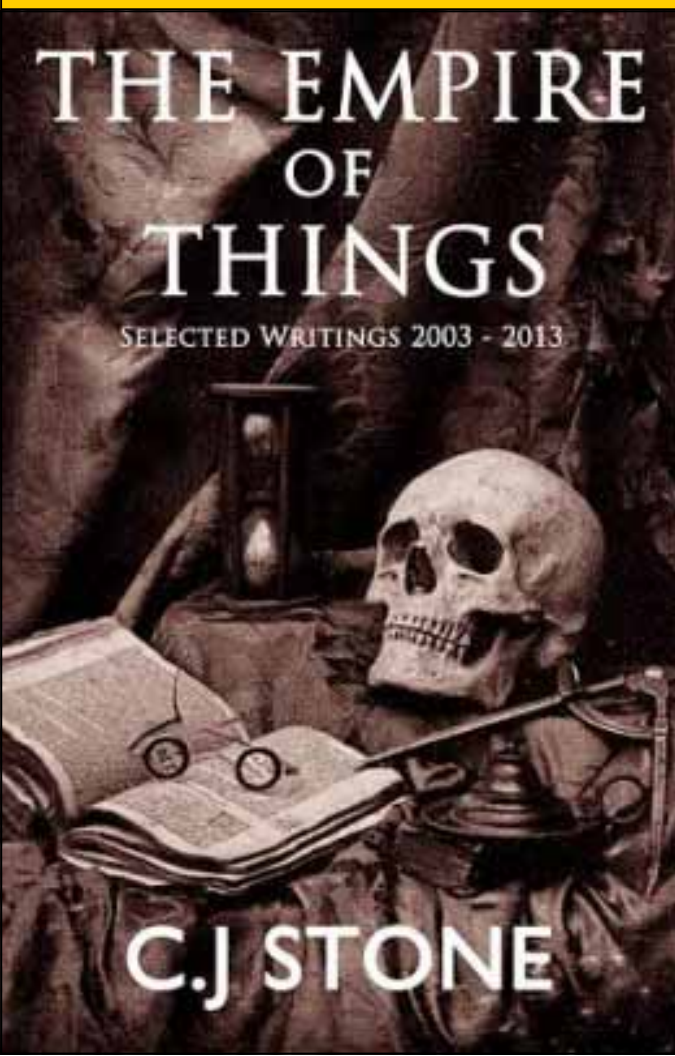

On account of the reality of the authorities, (inspired) by the spirit of the father of truth, the great apostle - referring to the "authorities of the darkness" - told us that "our contest is not against flesh and blood; rather, the authorities of the universe and the spirits of wickedness." I have sent this (to you) because you inquire about the reality of the authorities.

The reason that it seemed familiar at first is that, in fact, it was familiar, as I later found out. The quote, which is attributed to "the great apostle", is from a Biblical text, Ephesians 6:12, which in the King James version reads as follows:

For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places

What the Hypostasis of the Archons represents is an interpretation of that text in terms of the Creation Myth of Genesis. The thing that struck me immediately - and which sent a shiver of recognition through me - was that line: "our contest is not against flesh and blood". It's the body he is talking about. This is an explicitly political statement. It is a statement of solidarity for all creatures of flesh and blood, for human beings in all their weakness and fragility, their vulnerability and their susceptibility to pain, and against "the authorities of the universe and the spirits of wickedness", which, the King James version makes clear, is a specifically political target: "principalities... powers... the rulers of the darkness of this world.... spiritual wickedness in high places".

I read the line with a surge of gratitude to St. Paul for his tacit acknowledgement of the body, as a defence of the body against the powers that can control and inhibit the body - the authorities, the archons - which I understood as psychological forces, forces emanating from the invisible realms, but which have a specifically political dimension. I have to be clear at this point, so there is no confusion later on: to me the terms spiritual and psychological are the same. Spirit is from the Latin and means breath, while Psyche is from the Greek and also means breath. Both words

NOW AVAILABLE FROM GONZO MULTIMEDIA

"Stone writes with intelligence, wit and sensitivity."

Times Literary Supplement

refer to an invisible animating principle in the Universe, which the Hypostasis of the Archons recognises a few lines later in the following terms: "for by starting from the invisible world the visible world was invented". For me the really interesting stuff lies at the junction between these two worlds: between the visible and the invisible, between the body and the mind, between the social and the ideological, between what our natural human inclinations would lead us to express in our lives – our creativity, our human kindness - and what is imposed upon us by a system of domination and control. It is this realm, it seems to me, that the Hypostasis of the Archons is concerned with. I was just getting ready to go out at this point and I printed out the text to take with me, but, before I did, I had time to read the next lines, which are as follows:

Their chief is blind; because of his power and his ignorance and his arrogance he said, with his power, "It is I who am God; there is none apart from me."

When he said this, he sinned against the entirety. And this speech got up to incorruptibility; then there was a voice that came forth from incorruptibility, saying, "You are mistaken, Samael" - which is,

"god of the blind."

Again, there was a surge of recognition as I read these words. I immediately equated the god of the blind both with the God of the Old Testament and with George Bush, then in power in the White House. "His power and his ignorance and his arrogance" seemed an apt description of the then President of the United States, who at this time had mobilised the world into a vain and futile war to seize the economic assets of Iraq. I knew that, as a Gnostic Text, the Hypostasis of the Archons was written during the years of the Roman Empire, and would have had the Roman Emperor in mind, and I was struck by the similarity of the worlds we inhabited, then and now. I also saw that the God of the Old Testament, who is also clearly being referred to here, represented the ego in psychological terms. "It is I who am God; there is none apart from me."

I folded up the sheets of paper, grabbed my jacket, and went out to meet the world.

Yer Gonzo Bookshelf

My name is Jonathan and I am an addict. It's been ummmmmmmmm about two and a half hours since my last book. I am an inveterate reader, and have adored, devoured and collected books since I was about seven years old. This column was intended as a place to review books sent me by kindly publishers, but although such people do exist, and whilst I continue to get review books on occasion, and include them here, this column has evolved into reviewing the books—old and new—that I devour each week.

You Never Give Me Your Money: The Battle for the Soul of the "Beatles" by Peter Doggett

- Paperback: 400 pages
- Publisher: The Bodley Head Ltd; (24 Sep 2009)
- Language: English
- ISBN-10: 9781847920751
- ISBN-13: 978-1847920751

As I have mentioned several times in these pages, and because I am a creature of habit, I will probably mention again on occasion, I am not only a fan of the Beatles, and have been for four decades now, but I am an avid collector of books about them.

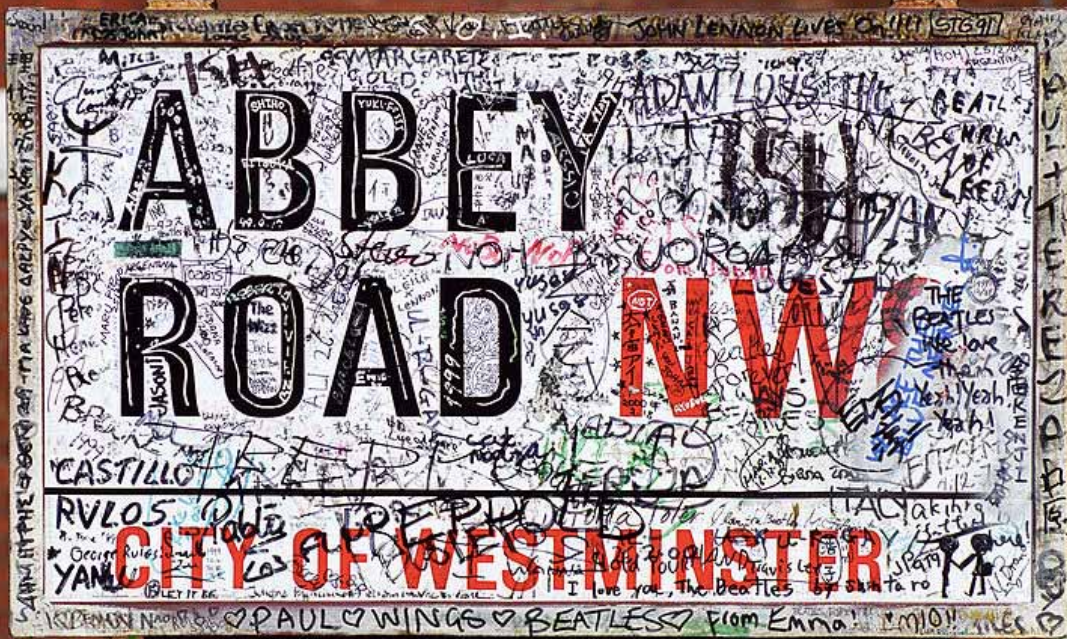

This is a particularly peculiar Beatles book; most books about the band stress the joyous nature of their music, the positive aspects of their work and the deep personal bond which exists/existed between them. This book is completely different. Joyous comradeship is something which makes hardly an appearance in these pages, which describe - in tortuous, but fascinating detail - exactly how they broke up, why they broke up, how at any one of a dozen times they could have got back together again, why they didn't and - most grippingly (and disturbingly) - how they spent much of the four decades which transpired between Paul McCartney leaving the group in April 1970 and the book being written some five years ago - screwing each other over in a vicious and quite remarkable manner.

It is not just the Beatles themselves who have come off worse in this book, but the whole concept of fame itself. In what seems a Faustian twist, the four Beatles attained a level of fame and fortune unparalleled by anybody else in the music business before or since, and it seems to have done nothing but make them utterly miserable. Their marriages collapsed, all four of them indulged in substance abuse at an industrial level, and even their business affairs seemed to bring them nothing but misery.

I hadn't realised, for example, that George Harrison had been facing bankruptcy with the collapse of handmade films and the revelations of misconduct by his manager of many years Denis O'Brien. In 2001, Harrison even took the unprecedented step of trying to keep O'Brien from declaring bankruptcy in order to try and claw back the $11 million O'Brien owed him.

Even for a Beatle $11 million is a huge amount of cash. What makes this new revelation so extraordinary is that Harrison was on his death bed at the time.

It appears that the only reason that Harrison agreed to become involved with the Beatles anthology, and the two attendant singles teaming up the three surviving members of the band playing on some not very good John Lennon demos from 1977, was because he needed the money. It also turned out for quite a time during the 1970s Harrison was having affair with Ringo Starr's wife, Maureen. However, as I discovered from reading Chris O'Dell's book a few weeks ago, at the same time Ringo was sleeping with The Pisces Apple Lady. The whole thing appears remarkably sordid from a vantage point of four decades on.

Something else that I hadn't realised was that the famous press release McCartney put out in 1970 was not meant to split the Beatles. However, as Paul was actually the last of the four member to have left it was meant to have levelled the playing field. I also discovered that there had been a very real possibility that the band would have regrouped during 1971 despite the fact they were all at each other's throats.

Bizarrely, the one character in the story who comes out – if not actually smelling of roses – appearing to be as nowhere near as history has painted him is Allen Klein who appears not to have been quite the black hearted knave that hindsight and history have painted. Indeed it could be argued that he was not treated very well by the Fab Four.

However, with a very few exceptions neither was anybody else, so Klein didn't really have anything much to complain about.

Reading this book was not a pleasant experience, however it was an undeniably fascinating one. It was akin to watching a train wreck out of which some people of whom you had always been rather fond came crawling out, their reputations disfigured for life. I strongly urge any Beatles fan to read this book.

HAWKWIND NEWS

(The Masters of the Universe do seem to have a steady stream of interesting stories featuring them, their various friends and relations, and alumni). Each week Graham Inglis keeps us up to date with the latest news from the Hawkverse..

Two different stories relating to Seaton, here...

Hawkwind's "Hawkeaster" event in Seaton is this month (Sat 19th, Sun 20th) and followers of Hawkwind on Facebook have been invited to select some tracks that they'd like to hear. The list of 70 candidates bizarrely includes "Cum on Feel the Noize," a 70s chart hit by glam rock outfit Slade.

It's been said that at least three of the top five requests will get played.

Currently in the lead is "Hassan-i Sahba" with 26 votes. This is odd, because that one's seldom been absent from the Hawkwind set-list for over 20 years!

"Psi Power," "Treadmill," "Spirit Of The Age" and "Levitation" make up the rest of the current Top Five. Seeing it as an opportunity to request rarer items, I went for the likes of "Damage of Life" and "Paradox" but since they're languishing on nine votes each, they've got a lot of ground to make up.

Meanwhile, video editing of the Hawkwind Rehearsal footage from Seaton is almost finished, and hopefully it'll find its way onto the DVD release of Hawkwind's recent Space Ritual performance in London.

GONZO

#72

People who are putting a DVD package together generally like to have plenty of stuff to choose from - having an embarrassment of riches, as it were - but I'd be sorry if this footage ends up on the cutting-room floor. We only had 3 cameras at the rehearsal, but shot-selection has been quite a time-consuming process. I've now got more of an appreciation of just how much work can go in to editing a multi-camera performance. Some gigs might have 6 or even 10 cameras scattered around!

Perhaps, though, that makes the job easier in a way, as each camera can be assigned a certain responsibility, rather like zonal marking or man-marking during a football attack. Then, editing could be driven by what the music's doing at the time. At the Seaton rehearsals, Jon and I both 'roamed at will' from very different positions, while the third camera got a static overview of the stage and backdrop.

! An oft-heard criticism of some Hawkwind gig vids in the past has been that they don't show enough of the overview. That's something I've been keeping in mind all the time, while editing. Hawkwind are a very visual outfit, but don't go in for 'guitar hero' posturing, so my approach is somewhat different to the average rock vid. Also, this was a rehearsal, not a high-energy stadium rock event with people crowd-surfing or slam-dancing.

Accordingly, changes of view are somewhat leisurely in pace, rather than your dramatic high-speed chopping between one camera and another, say during a drum roll or what-have-you.

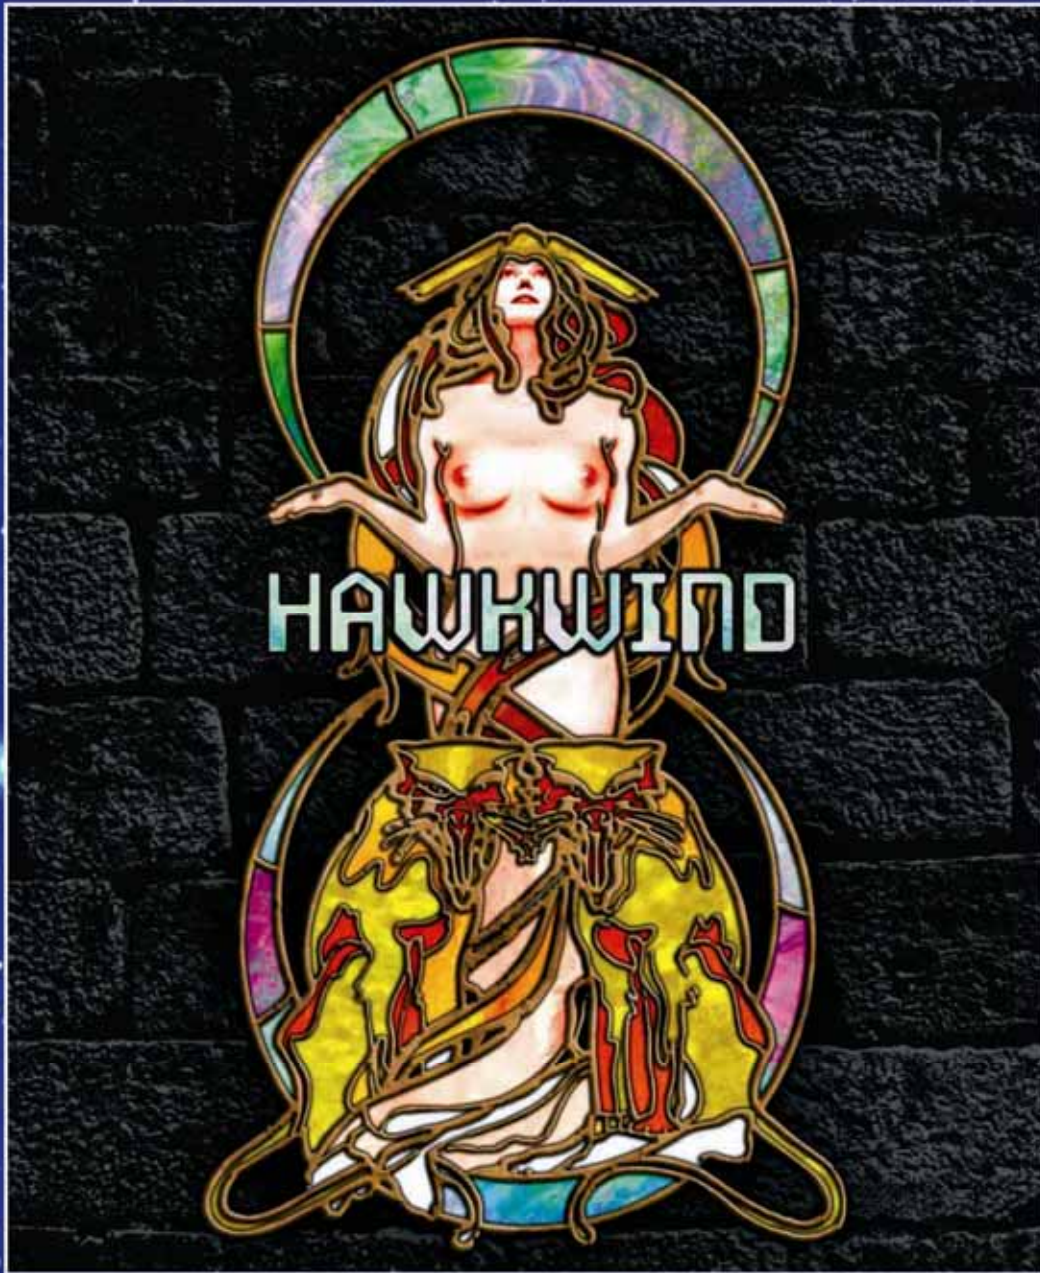

The editing's been an interesting experience, and hopefully it won't get a panning from The Times' art review critic...

A weekend indoor festival of music, dance, arts and psychedelic fun for all the family!

Things are shaping up nicely for Hawkeaster 2014 and with Easter weekend falling almost a month later than last year, (19/20th April), we are hoping the weather will be a lot warmer....

The same as last year, there will be a bus running between the campsite and the venue after the show.

The tourist attractions, shops, pubs and cafes of Seaton are again giving us a warm welcome and will be offering discounts to everyone attending the weekend.

We will be opening the doors on the evening of Friday 18th April for registration, wristbands and a social get together with music and DVDs on the big screen and a full bar..... This worked very well last year and it was a great evening...

We will again open the venue on Easter Monday morning/lunchtime to meet for a goodbye picnic lunch.

Children are welcome at Hawkeaster, there will be a Kidszone provided where children can take part in activities during the day and be supervised during evening performances.

April 7 - 12, 2014

www.CruiseToTheEdge.com

Very excited to be going on the Cruise to the Edge trip to Honduras and Cozumel this coming April 7, 2014. To date I've been a bit wary of going on a cruise as I'm not quite seaworthy and typically regret any time spent without feet on terra firma!

However, as this particular cruise will have as entertainment over a dozen famous progressive rock bands of the 1970's and beyond - I'm intrigued.

Besides Yes who host the event, we have:

- Genesis Revisited (Steve Hackett),
- UK (John Wetton, Eddie Jobson, plus),
- PFM (Premiata Forneria Marconi from Italy),
- Three Friends (former members of Gentle Giant - Gary Green and Malcolm Mortimer),
- Marillion,
- and Tangerine Dream.

Plus having ace keys player Patrick Moraz, stick man Tony Levin, and the great Simon Phillips on skins, among so many others made it too hard to say "no" to this cruise event.

As we've been able to catch Yes, UK and Steve Hackett recently, the biggest draw for me is being able to meet and see Gary Green play live once again after all these years.

Three Friends has not made it to the west coast in the states to perform the music of Gentle Giant, so this is a rare treat. Also key is the inclusion of PFM from Italy. Its rare to catch them outside their home country and this is arguably one of the best ever progressive rock bands of the past, and present. Check out their latest disc for proof - the wonderful PFM in Classic da Mozart - a Celebration to witness how they have sustained their craft.

Planning to file reports as we go, as long as the Dramamine kicks in!

The Court Circular tells interested readers about the comings and goings of members of The Royal Family.

However, readers of this periodical seem interested in the comings and goings of Yes and of various alumni of this magnificent and long-standing band. Give the people what they want, I say...

This is probably the best week we have had all year for news from the Yes camp and from the various alumni, not just in terms of volume, but in terms of contact as well. For example we have Jon Davison talking about his role in the composition of the new album...

'I had lots of material': Jon Davison on the fast-paced sessions for Yes' Heaven and Earth

... and two interviews with Chris Squire, one about the new album and the other announcing that he is working on his autobiography...

Chris Squire - Yes bassist Chris Squire writing autobiography

Chris Squire of Yes Talks 'Heaven and Earth' Album, New Singer, Rock Hall

... and some nice little overviews of where the band are at the moment...

...and changing the subject a little, a nice little piece on Jon Anderson...

Back to the Mothership, here is an official looking announcement about the new album and the forthcoming US tour...

But now another odd one. Jon Anderson, with typically impish humour makes a surprise appearance on a US radio show...

And finally a sad story from Trevor Horn's local paper

I am probably getting a bit OCD about all of this, but I find the Yes soap opera of sound to be absolutely enthralling, and I for one can't wait to see what happens next!

Earlier this week I received a brief ew-mail and two photographs from my favourite roving reporter. The email read: “Meeting my musical hero ,here I am with my wife meeting 'the big guy'.. Sending you a few more photos,and,now you know what old Barty looks like,as well.. Yours in America.... Bart”

I wrote back and told him that he simply couldn't leave me with such sketchy details. He had to tell me more. And so basically I bullied him into writing this review...

From March 30, 2014
Performance by Jon Anderson-the Voice of YES

Trying to contain my excitement, even as I've seen his solo act now several times, my heart races as the show time nears. The New Jersey Performing Arts Center (NJPAC) houses a small intimate theater known as 'The Victoria Theater', and this is a perfect place to see my musical hero – JON ANDERSON.

Before the show,I'm among the lucky few who get to meet with Jon, and he's as gracious as always. He tells me of his upcoming project with Jean-Luc Ponty, and that the rumors of he and Rick Wakeman going out again are untrue, due to Rick's involvement with his “Journey To The Center of the Earth” revival project. A quick kiss for my wife,and we wish him a good show, and its off to our seats.

A simple stage set-up is what we find, with an acoustic guitar, an electric piano, a strange 'stick-like' instrument resembling a guitar, and , of all things, a ukulele. Candles fill the stage with soft light, and Jon enters to a standing ovation. He plays several YES songs with the guitar, his voice as clear as ever. 'Yours is No Disgrace', 'Long-Distance Runaround', 'And You and I'.

He moves back and forth to the various instruments, singing a song of his adventures with his brother Tony, in their "Warriors" days, and getting the crowd to sing along with his tiny ukulele to the Beatles hit, "A Day in the Life".

One of my personal favorites is his rendition of a song from his 1976 solo record 'Olias of Sunhillow', and I found myself lost in its magic.

Jon tells stories in between songs, and shows a great sense of humor, and delights with the crowd's enthusiasm.

Jon ends his set with "Your Move/ All Good People", followed by "Roundabout", and he commands the audience to stand, sing, and clap, and we do so, with joy.

He seems to truly be at peace with his audience, and we all feel it. He returns for an encore of "Wondrous Stories", and "Soon", the ending movement from "Gates of Delirium".

I find myself shedding a tear when he leaves the stage for the last time. Looking around, I'm not the only one

Changing the world one gift at a time

The worldwide Freecycle Network is made up of many individual groups across the globe. It's a grassroots movement of people who are giving (and getting) stuff for free in their own towns. Freecycle groups match people who have things they want to get rid of with people who can use them. Our goal is to keep usable items out of landfills. By using what we already have on this earth, we reduce consumerism, manufacture fewer goods, and lessen the impact on the earth. Another benefit of using Freecycle is that it encourages us to get rid of junk that we no longer need and promote community involvement in the process.

"Thom the World poet is an old mate of mine from way back in my history. Even pre-dating Voiceprint, when I was running "Otter Songs" and Tom's poetry tapes and guest appearances with Daavid Allen, Gilli Smyth Mother Gong are well known and highly regarded. It just felt right to include a daily poem from Thom on our Gonzo blog and when I approached him to do so, he replied with in seconds!!! Thom is a great talent and just wants to spread poetry, light and positive energy across the globe. If we at Gonzo can help him do that - why not? why not indeed!!!"

a cabinet of curiosities

In Victorian times every well-bred Gentleman had a 'Cabinet of Curiosities'; a collection of peculiar odds and sods, usually housed in a finely made cabinet with a glass door. These could include anything from Natural History specimens to historical artefacts. There has always been something of the Victorian amateur naturalist about me, and I have a houseful of arcane objects; some completely worthless, others decidedly not, but all precious to me for the memories they hold.

But people send me lots of pictures of interesting, and, may I say, peculiar things. But once again this week it is over to my lovely wife...

Grab yourself a fashionable wall clock to enhance your fashionable sitting room. Pop over to Ebay today to get a:

It lights up! It is officially licensed! And feels like your back in the swinging 60's apparently. I am not too sure how a clock can feel like my back did in the 60's, so I am going to assume the seller means 'you're'.

But – wait for it - most impressive of all: “..... with this great flashing Elvis wall clock”.

Elvis Presley flashing? When? Quarterly or on the hour? Goodness gracious, great ... oops wrong singer.

- unfortunately, he wasn't actually there to receive such a worthy accolade
- shame on the person who defended him. Tsk.

THE NINE HENRYS

The Nine Henrys are a quirky bunch of cloned cartoon characters. They live in a strange lo-fi domestic surrealist world peopled by talking rock buns and elephants on wobbly stilts. Over the years the Henrys have been published in a variety of local NE magazines and now here for the first time thanks to Gonzo Multi-Media the Nine Henrys are brought together in a compendium of line art craziness.

modada@ninehenrys.com

There are nine Henrys, purported to be the world's first cloned cartoon character. They live in a strange lo-fi domestic surrealist world peopled by talking rock buns and elephants on wobbly stilts.

They mooch around in their minimalist universe suffering from an existential crisis with some genetically modified humour thrown in. I think Peter McAdam is one of the funniest people around, and I cannot recommend his book The Nine Henrys highly enough. Check it out at Amazon.

Each issue we shall be running a series of Henrybits that are not found in his book about the nine cloned cartoon characters who inhabit a surreal world nearly as insane as mine...

weird weekend 2014

The Weird Weekend is the largest yearly gathering of mystery animal investigators in the English-speaking world. Now in its fifteenth year, the convention attracts speakers and visitors from all over the world and showcases the findings of investigators into strange phenomena.

Cryptozoologists, parapsychologists, ufologists, and folklorists are descending on Woolfardisworthy Community Centre to share their findings and insights. Unlike other events, the Weird Weekend will also include workshops giving tips to budding paranormal investigators, and even a programme of special events for children.

The Weird Weekend is the only fortean conference in the world that is truly a family event, although those veterans of previous events should be reassured that it is still as anarchically silly as ever!

The event is raising money for the Centre for Fortean Zoology, the world's only full time, professional cryptozoological organisation. The profit from food and beverages goes to a selection of village charities, mostly working with children.

THE WORLD OF KEV ROWLAND

ROADFEVER WOLF PACK (AVENUE OF ALLIES)

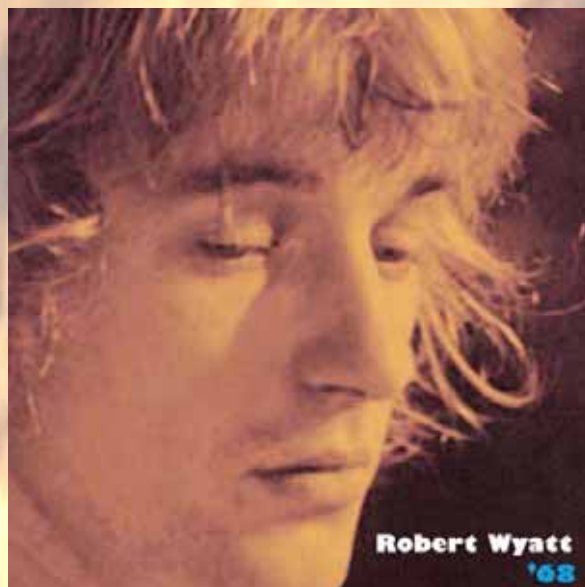

This is the second album by Swiss female-fronted power metal outfit Roadfever who have more than a passing similarity to Heart in many ways. But, the major difference is that Heart really know how to write great songs while Roadfever have good bits. Let's take the title cut which unfortunately opens the album (it took a lot of effort for me not to skip the album altogether during that song). The chorus is "We're a wolf pack – desert wolves".

I know that, as they sing it 17 times during a song that is under five minutes long. I actually played it again just so that I could count it – take it from me it seems way more than that when you're listening to it.

The really frustrating thing about this album is that there is no doubt that they are all good musicians, and that Stevie "Manou" Pike has a wonderful voice, and that parts of the songs, and indeed some of the songs, are well worth hearing.

But, there are times when playing this that I start to wonder how long until I can turn it off and play something else instead.

Given what I can hear I am sure that they are a cracking live act and well worth catching in concert where the lack of song quality won't be so noticeable, but when it comes to this album I'll give it a miss, sorry. www.avenue-of-allies.com

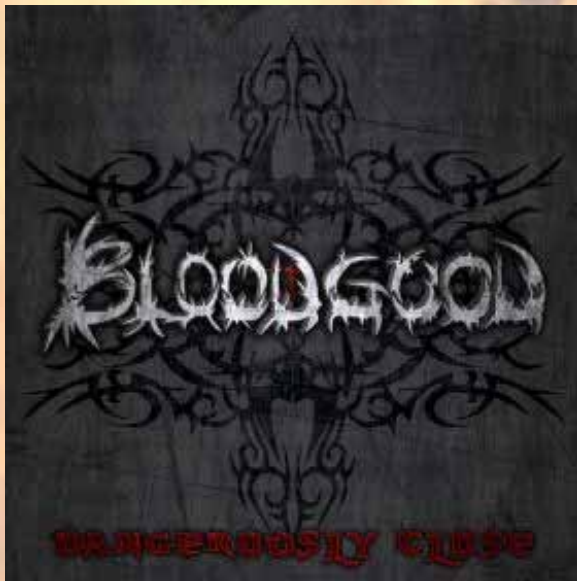

ROBERT WYATT '68 (CUNEIFORM)

Just four songs, a fraction over 45 minutes long, comprise this release, which is a complete set of Robert Wyatt's solo recordings made in the US in late 1968. Until reappearing last year, the demo for "Rivmic Melodies" (all 18 minutes of it), an extended sequence of song fragments destined to form the first side of the second album by Soft Machine, was presumed lost forever while the shorter song on the same acetate, "Chelsa", wasn't even known to exist! Wyatt recorded these songs during some down time during and after Soft Machine's second American tour with the Jimi Hendrix Experience. He multi-tracked the recording, playing piano and organ as well as drumming and singing, and even some bass - although Hendrix himself provided the bass for "Slow Walkin' Talk. There is something incredibly fragile about these recordings, with Wyatt alone in the studio setting the scene for what the Softs were going to be doing in forthcoming years. It is quite hard to judge this music on its' own merits, given it's importance historically, but fortunately this is something that every Softs/ Matching Mole/Wyatt (and even Hendrix) fan will want to have not because it was going to form the basis for so much musical experimentation, but because it is so damned good.

There is a depth and quality to this music that belies the fact that these songs were recorded on acetate 45 years ago. They have been cleaned up incredibly well and I am sure that they sound better now than when they were first heard all those year ago. Robert's pianowork is strident, structured and fluid yet also staccato, while his drumming is an incredibly important part of the overall sound. His vocals are delicate, emotional, fraught and another sound to be utilized. To me "Rivmic Melodies" is a stunning piece of work, with the repeated high notes taking the song into another area altogether. This has been made available on CD with a 16 page booklet, and as seems fitting it is also available on limited edition vinyl (with the same information on an insert). Released with Robert's approval and full co-operation, this is essential stuff.

BLOODGOOD DANGEROUSLY CLOSE (DOOLITTLE GROUP)

Towards the end of the Eighties I became aware of a growing White Metal movement in America, led by Petra and Stryper. I particularly liked the latter, while my sister went for bands like Joshua and Bloodgood. So, although I haven't come across any of their music for a long time I am aware of these guys, and know the impact of their second album 'Detonation' when they became one of the few WM bands ever to sell a million copies of an album. This is their first album for a considerable number of years, but founder members singer Les Carlsen and bassist Michael Bloodgood are still there, along with guitarists Paul Jackson (who joined at the end of the Eighties) and Oz Fox who joined in '06 (yes, this is the same Oz Fox who is a founder member of Stryper and still plays with them after 30 years). Strangely, although their website shows a five man line-up there are no details as to who plays drums on this album, so I don't know if there has been a recent change in the band.

But what about the music? Is it likely to have the same impact as they did when they first burst onto the scene in 1986? Well, no. This is middle of the road hard rock with some melodic metal elements – in some ways it reminds me of Magnum, but without the complexity. Everything is, well, pleasant. But, it does have to be remembered that the target audience here are not going to be your every day metalheads, but rather Christians who want something a bit more vibrant than Larry Norman. This is sanitised even by American standards, with lyrics that are pushing the Christian message throughout, and with song titles such as "Pray", "Lamb of God" and "The Word" there isn't going to be much confusion as to what this is about. One thing I used to like about Stryper is that their songs were great songs, with hooks and melodies, but this seems to concentrate more on the message and less about the quality. www.bloodgoodband.com

TAYLOR'S UNIVERSE EVIDENCE (MARVEL OF BEAUTY)

So here we have the second album from 2013 for Robin (guitars, keyboards, bass, flute, percussion), and he has been joined again by Karsten Vogel (sax, clarinet), Klaus Thrane (drums) and Louise Nipper (gentle vocals on one number). But, he has also brought into the band for the first time both Claus Bøhling (guitars) and Thomas Thor Viderø Ulstrup (synthesizer). I have long since learned that Robin has an immensely broad musical palette, and I should never really be surprised at what I hear, but yet again I find myself nodding sagely and wondering just how he does it. What we have here is an album that in many ways is more restrained and immediate than many of his works, just four songs giving us 44 minutes of music. The gentle keyboards provide the foundation for Claus and Karsten to let loose when they feel the need. Such is Claus's control and feel I did some searching on the web to discover a bit more about him, and was not surprised to find that he has been around for a large number of years, most notably in the power trio Hurdy Gurdy at the end of the Sixties (Donovan wrote the song "Hurdy Gurdy Man" for them, but after a disagreement on how it should sound he release it himself). He is fluid and dynamic, with plenty of attack and pace while also knowing how to be restrained and emotional.

There is a lot of space within this album, and a feeling of a timelessness as the listener gets taken away to a different world where there is nothing but the music. The only thing wrong with the album is that it is too damn short! The more I have played it the more I have enjoyed it, and though there are some elements of Oldfield, the guitar especially takes it to a different level. 31 albums down, and Robin shows no sign at all of slowing, I just wonder what the next one will be like as this is one of his very best. www.progressor.net/robin-taylor/index.htm

The Gonzzo Postbox

By the time Iggy Pop came on it was like a Cliff Richards gig. Nirvana's set has now gone down in history which is hype and bollocks. They were so ponderous after the all-girl Babes In Toyland and the mad Scots in Silverfish that me and my then girlfriend went back to the tent cos it was bringing us down off our green gelatinous cubes made out of MDMA.

We come back out for Sonic Youth but wished we hadn't and then halfway through Iggy's set we went for a walk along the river.

Then the drugs came back up again. As Leary and Anton Wilson rightly said it's all about set and setting. It was a great day but proves that "The Emperor's New Clothes" is one of thee most important fables in human history. I bet Primal Scream were better at a GPC gig than the lame pop shit they come out with these days.

Babes In Toyland never went off the boil. No siree bob! They ushered in the strongest ecstasy hit we'd had by that time.

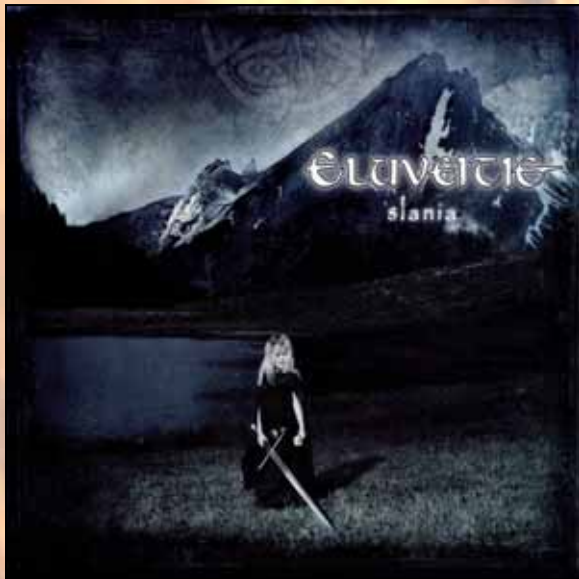

CRAIG HIGH REMEMBERS

I just wrote this on the Greenwich Performance Collective wall which I help facilitate concerning a gig they put on in the early 80s that had a band called Primal Scream headlining..... I remember this. Could well have been the real Primal Scream.

I saw Sonic Youth down the Cellar Bar of Thames Poly {84?} in front of about 15 people and it was a better gig than when I next saw them in front of 2000 at Reading Festival in 93 {?}. I love Sonic Youth but they were shit in front of 2000 people trying to follow Nirvana, Silverfish and Babes in Toyland. But then Nirvana were shit compared to Silverfish and Babes In Toyland and Silverfish were shit compared to Babes in Toyland. It was like the day got progressively worse the bigger the acts got.

OMG I've just found their whole set from that festival ON YOUTUBE! FUUCKING HELLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLL! Right I'm off to watch this all over again. Better see what's in the fridge! 9:09am on a Monday morning and I'm already puttin off all the things I had to do! Uh oh I've kicked the link off immediately.... it's a home vid {even for 93} but who cares about broadcast quality! It's the content that counts! Sounds fucking wicked as I write this! Cobain probably shot himself cos he felt for all the acts that were as good as his but gettin nowhere in comparison. I'd feel angry about that! Cxx

ELUVEITIE

Eluveitie is an 8-member folk metal band from Zurich, Switzerland. They were formed by Chrigel Glanzmann in 2002 and:

GONZO

#72

And so, boys and girls, it comes to the end of another fun packed week. We are beginning to get our heads around this new method of production, and the fact that I have dragged Andrea, my lovely and incredibly useful secretary into the production team has made an immeasurable difference to our efficiency and speed of production.

Everything went wrong with last weekend's issue with the result that we didn't get it posted online until it was very late on the Saturday evening—something like six hours after we should have done.

This had the result that the readership of this last issue was nowhere near as high as we have come to expect. I hope that we have better luck with this one.

The demographics of online publishing is a subject completely new to me and I am doing my best to learn how it all works.

I have not got there yet, but I think that we are making slow but sure progress, and that The Gonzo Weekly is a magazine of which we can all be justly proud.

It has been a peculiar week; Archie has not been well, Graham has been gallivanting around the countryside, and I had Mike Davis in the studio, recording new material and doing mastering of his long awaited and slightly delayed new EP.

I have also been working with a project named after an obscure village on the coast of Mexico which for some years in the mid sixties was home to a group of notorious occultists from Swinging London. This is some of the most exciting and vibrant music I have ever recorded, and I am very much looking forward to sharing it with you all at some stage.

But until next week, I am gone...
