THE THREE COMMANDMENTS OF GONZO WEEKLY:

1. Art is as important as science and more important than money

2. There is life after (beyond and before) Pop Idol

3. Music can and sometimes does change the world

If you think those three ideas are stupid then you should probably give up reading this magazine now. Otherwise... enjoy
Dear friends,

Welcome to another issue of this ever increasingly strange publication.

As I have said on occasion, the further we go down the path of this magazine’s lifespan, the further away from the original remit of being a music magazine, mostly about men in late middle age with beards and wild, staring eyes, we go. Whilst that description certainly fits some of the editorial team, it is less descriptive of the stuff that we write about. I have always been perfectly open about the way that I use these editorial pages as a reflection of my life, trawling through the various quasi-cultural pathways that I go down, and this week is no exception.

In the weeks since I lost my darling wife, my recreation time has, perforce, changed. I no longer spend the evenings watching as many alternative documentaries on YouTube etc as I once did. This is mostly because these are things that Corinna and I did together, and at the moment, I do not feel strong enough to revisit our old cultural haunts. This is something with which I have dealt before. For example, after my divorce in 1996, it took me a good eight years before I could happily listen to people like Fairport Convention and “In the weeks since I lost my darling wife, my recreation time has, perforce, changed. I no longer spend the evenings watching as many alternative documentaries on YouTube etc as I once did. “

Al Stewart, who had been favourites of Alison and mine. So, I have a bloody great experiential void in my life which needs to be filled.

In the wake of the events of 1996, I filled it with sex, drugs and rock and roll and quite a lot of all three, but now I am older and wiser, and I spend much of my life cuddling the dog, and doing anagram puzzles on my iPad.

Having completely demolished my reputation of a Rock and Roll Animal from the planet Freakout, I will explain what that has got to do with this issue’s editorial. I suppose, to be clever, I should have found an anagram of editorial, but I can’t think of one.

I already play various strategy games on my iPad and have done for years, and because I am a cheapskate, I don’t pay for them and prefer to put up with the mild inconvenience of having to watch a whole bunch of generic adverts occasionally, in lieu of payment. But within the last couple of weeks, I have noticed that these adverts have changed. Instead of being adverts for other games, or the sort of gadgets which people buy you for Christmas, you look at once, and then forget all about, the vast majority of these ads suddenly started being for games which claimed to earn you money when you played. Well, I have always been a great believer in the old adage that if something seems too good to be true, it probably is, and so I ignored them. But after a week or so, I began to wonder how it was that these adverts which were presumably bought and paid for by relatively respectable corporations, and which certainly had to pass the stringent conditions of the Apple AppStore (and I know from my own experience that these can be very stringent, but that’s another story for another time), how do they manage to get away with it, if it is a complete con?

So, in the spirit of scientific investigation, I started playing the remunerative version of one of the anagram games that I was already playing.

It is a very peculiar experience, playing a game that has been tailored to give the player miniature doses of endorphins often enough to keep them interested, in which the ultimate goal for every player is purely to make money, when I (as a first person player) knew perfectly well that I wasn’t going to get any cash at the end of it, and am just doing it for an intellectual exercise.

It started off all quite easily. The first few rounds, every time I completed the big anagram at the end of the page, I was rewarded with a message flashing up at the top of the screen saying I have won 1, 5, and in one case 9, dollars. In between the different rounds, I was treated to much the same videos as had drawn me into this experiment, but as I got further along the experiential path, two things happened. Firstly, the rewards became smaller, and secondly, they began to be less regular. But, as I got to the stage wherein I can imagine yer average punter thinking, “fuck this for a game of soldiers” (or should that be, “fuck this for a game of anagrams”?), I noticed that the videos which one had to sit through were beginning to change.

I am perfectly aware of the way that video game companies make subtle, and often not so subtle, use of scantily clad female models and actresses, in order to sell their products. I remember that one particular episode of the Command and Conquer series, which I used to quite enjoy back in the days that I could get my PC to play them, introduced a character so pulchritudinous that even the fourteen year old boys at whom I imagine she was aimed would not believe that girls actually looked like that. And I have seen my fair share of busty and scantily clad young women turning up on these adverts. But, as the financial rewards fell, the videos changed rather subtly and now showed modestly dressed young women from lower income families playing these allegedly lucrative games for the first time and jumping for joy in exaggerated orgasmic bliss when they first hit the jackpot. But, when one begins to analyse these videos, one sees something even more peculiar. As these apparent modestly dressed young women jump about in the excitement of having become rich beyond their dreams of avarice, they all reveal a small portion of naked flesh as they do so. None of this flesh is in erogenous zones, and nobody with the most jaundiced Mary Whitehouse eyes could find anything indecent or pornographic here, but although the actresses in these little vignettes are far from various ethnic backgrounds – Caucasian, Oriental, and Afro Caribbean – the videos are all remarkably similar. And it makes one wonder what the message is.

Now, I am going to be a completely rotten bugger here, and this is where I’m going to leave you for this issue. Because, not only do I have a considerable amount more to impart, but I am still engaged in my little experiment. And so, I will pick up the threads of this editorial in two weeks’

IT’S A LEGAL MATTER BABY

A lot of the time the pictures that we include in this publication are unique to Gonzo Weekly, and used with the photographer’s permission. However, this magazine is free, and at least at the moment only available online, and so in our opinion we are covered by a recent decision by the European Courts of Justice.

Websites can link to freely available content without the permission of the copyright holder, the European Court of Justice says. The court’s decision came after a dispute in Sweden between journalists and a web company that had posted links on its site to online news articles.

A Swedish court had asked the EU court to consider whether this broke copyright law.

Some of the pictures in this magazine are hotlinked to other websites where they are freely available. It is our opinion that we are covered by this ruling. So there!

Of course if someone objects to our using their material we will be good fellows and take it down, unless (and this is a big unless) we feel that it is not in the public interest to comply.

But normally we shall not stand on ceremony. If you want to read more about this decision go to:

This is quite simply the best magazine you will ever find that is edited by a mad bloke (and his small orange cat), and produced from a tumbledown potato shed on the outskirts of a tiny village that nobody’s heard of in North Devon. The fact that it is published with Gonzo Multimedia - probably the grooviest record company in the known universe - is merely an added bonus.

This is the nearest that you are ever going to get to a posh weekend colour supplement from the Gonzo Daily team. Each week we shall go through the best bits of the week before, and if there aren’t any we shall make some up, or simply make our excuses and leave (you can tell the editor once did contract work at the News of the World can’t ya?)

This weekly magazine is free, and will remain so. It is published by Gonzo Multimedia in conjunction with CFZ Publications, or is it the other way round? We’re actually not that sure. Contact us with bribes and free stuff:

Michael Eavis is considering putting "massive testing arrangements" in place for the Glastonbury Festival next year. This year's 50th anniversary edition of the British music extravaganza, which was to feature Paul McCartney, Taylor Swift, and Kendrick Lamar as headliners, was called off due to the coronavirus pandemic.

It's expected to return next June, with organiser Michael talking about how things will change for the next festival as he spoke at Wells Cathedral School on Tuesday night as part of the Wells Festival of Literature.

"The testing is going so well now, there could be massive testing arrangements," he said. "Do we want to test 200,000 people three times – when they leave their home, when they're halfway here, and when they get to the (festival) gate – so that we're clear of Covid?"

Eavis was also asked during the Q&A session what his "one wish" would be for the 2021 festival, to which he replied that he is desperate for Fleetwood Mac to perform.

Jimmy Page, Robert Plant and John Paul Jones, along with late original drummer John Bonham's son Jason - got back together for a one-off show at London's O2 as part of a tribute to late Atlantic Record President Ahmet Ertegun and the guitarist has revealed they had initially planned to do more than just a single show, but further dates just never materialised.

Noticeably not mentioning singer Plant, Page said: "We'd had a lot of fun up to that point in the rehearsals because mainly it was the three of us.

"There'd be Jason [Bonham], John Paul Jones and myself playing together, so that Jason felt really part of the band, as opposed to like he's there because he's John's son. He was there because he was a damn good drummer and it was right that he should be sitting in that seat. But he needed to know that.

"And yeah, a lot of rehearsals went into it. We were ready for it.

"It had been said that there was going to be a tour. There weren't any dates put in, but obviously we had honed ourselves to the point where we were ready."

Plant admits that a tour has never been discussed since, and he has ruled it out from ever happening again.

BABY BABY BABY

Noddy Holder referenced the band's festive classic 'Merry Xmas Everybody' and called for a positive development during the UK's battle with the coronavirus as the festive season approaches.

He told The Sun newspaper: "As with
WHO GONZO? WHY GONZO? WHAT GONZO?

What? You don't know who Hunter Thompson is/was/might have been/will be? Without Hunter Thompson there would be no Gonzo Multimedia. It would have been completely different and that would have been an unforgivable pity. So here is:

- A potted history of his life and works
- Rob Ayling explains why he called his company 'Gonzo'

C.J. Stone suggested that as well as explaining Gonzo to those who don't understand, we should do a weekly quote from the man himself:

"Jesus Creeping God! Is there a priest in this tavern? I want to confess! I'm a fucking sinner! Venal, mortal, carnal, major, minor - however you want to call it, Lord... I'm guilty."

Hunter S. Thompson

everyone else, we can only 'Look to the future now'.

"The best Christmas present any of us could get this year is a vaccine for this crazee virus. (sic)"

His call to arms comes a few after the 74-year-old rocker revealed he has started "playing guitar again" and thinking about a big comeback.

He recently said: "I have a stockpile written over the years.

"I didn't just stop, bang, and that was the end of the story. I still have moments when I get the inspiration. But I couldn't do it night after night, year after year."

Noddy quit Slade in 1992, and hasn't made a solo record or hit the road since.

And although the coronavirus pandemic has made things difficult for the live music industry, he's not ruling out a return to the stage.

He added: "Well, never say never - I might do it now. If they ever let me out of the house.

MACCA iii

Paul McCartney who released his debut solo LP 'McCartney' in 1970 and followed with 'McCartney II' a decade later - is set to announce the next record on Thursday (22.10.20).

A source told The Sun newspaper's Bizarre column: "Paul has been totally alone, with no producer or sound engineer, while making this record, just as he was for the previous two volumes.

"Obviously this time around recording in isolation wasn’t his choice."
"But it made complete sense for this album to be the third in the trilogy, particularly given the first came out five decades ago."

It's said Macca "had to get experimental" recording during the coronavirus lockdown, and the 'Hey Jude' hitmaker was happy to use whatever he could find around the house. The insider added: "It's been a true solo effort and he had to get experimental with what he used as instruments, hence the saucepan.

"He’s now gearing up to put it out in the coming weeks, with a global announcement due tomorrow."

"Fish has announced that he’s cancelled his February 2021 UK tour, citing the continued impact of the Coronavirus pandemic. He's also cancelled his festival appearances. As things stand, he's hopeful that the September 2021 tour will still go ahead.

In a lengthy statement on his Facebook page, the singer, who released his latest (and final) album Weltschmerz earlier this month, Fish says:

"After consultation with my UK promoters at Gig Cartel and venues we have decided to cancel the February 2021 UK tour which was replacing the March 2020 dates and refund the ticket money"
The Blur frontman has hit out at the British government's "callous" viral campaign, which urged creatives to retrain and featured a picture of a Ballerina named Fatima.

The poster, which was quickly retracted, read: "Fatima’s next job could be in cyber. She just doesn’t know it yet."

And also featured the slogan: "Rethink. Reskill. Reboot."

The 52-year-old singer was left furious by the campaign and says the government needs to think about how important people's dreams are before shattering them by suggesting they quit their job as a musician or performer, especially amid the coronavirus pandemic, because "undermining" the "human spirit" could have a detrimental impact on people's mental health.

In an interview with The Sun newspaper, Damon fumed: “This retraining nonsense is bordering on callous.

“If someone’s studied ballet or music or theatre, they simply don’t have an option to recalibrate their lives.

“For ballet, they probably started when they were three or four and are totally dedicated to it... like footballers or gymnasts.

BLONDIE’S WORK IN PROGRESS

Blondie have been working on new material to keep themselves "sane" during the coronavirus crisis.

The American rock band plan to release their 12th studio album to coincide with their ten-date UK tour in 2021, and drummer Clem Burke has revealed that Debbie Harry started writing during the coronavirus lockdown.

Clem said: "We are working with each other on new material. We wanted to start recording but lockdown stopped that.

"Really we have been creating new music to keep ourselves sane. You can do so much over the internet. We’ve been collaborating around the world. We have a great working relationship."
However, it has all been thrown into free-fall with the arrival in the western world of the disease COVID-19. It has been a real game changer, all across the board. But – as both Steve Andrews and I have written elsewhere in this issue – the effects that it has wrought are not wholly bad.

Rick Wakeman has always been an

As regular readers of this magazine will know, one of the things which has interested me a lot over the eight years of which we have been in existence, is the way that the new technology has changed the way that we consume music, books and films, and in doing so changes the relationship that we have with these things.
innovator. He was the first person to stage a version of the Arthurian stories of Sir Thomas Mallory on ice, featuring his own grandiose rock music, and a load of chicks wearing stockings and suspenders. In fact, as far as I’m aware, he’s the only person ever to have done this, but it does prove that he is a man with a singular vision.

And what’s his latest project? In the wake of his instrumental album about the planet Mars, which has garnered him the most positive reviews he has had in decades (since the chicks in suspenders, no less), he now is presenting the world with a new venture; a venture filmed in his sitting room!

In 2005 in a studio far, far away, (Norfolk), an elderly musician would broadcast and stream “Rick’s Plaice” to the world on Saturday Morning. Nobody really knew who he was, but a select few believed him to be the alter ego “Hands Solo” named after his exploits on the mini Moog.

Fraught with danger, he was constantly under attack from the owners of the planet known as “ROCK” for flying too close to the surface of decency and in 2010 was eventually banished to the galaxy known as “Grumpy” where, for the last 10 years, he has secretly plotted a return to the airwaves and now the time has come...

Ar Rick says

“I can’t wait for the first series of the new ‘Rick’s Plaice’ to be shown as it will be a nice guideline for me for the second series as to how much weight I need to lose. And if you have as much fun watching the shows with all of the live music performances, guided tours around my equipment, facts about musicians I have worked with and even a quiz, then you will have enjoyed them as much as I enjoyed making them...which I have to say was most enjoyable. We’re already planning for the filming of the XMAS special and also getting ready for a second series, and I really hope that once the unsocial distancing rules are relaxed, that for the recording and filming we can have live audiences in with us without them having to wear masks and stinking of hand sanitizer. Enjoy...we did.” – Rick Wakeman “Rick’s Plaice” will premiere on Saturday on November 7th and then broadcast every Saturday for the following five weeks.

We are also offering a season ticket pass (all six episodes + the New Year Special) at a special price.

Gonzo readers are been offered a special discount code which gives them a 25% discount on the season pass. Please note this is ONLY for the first 5,000 subscribers of the season pass.

THE NAZCA CAT

Feline geoglyph from 200-100BC emerges during work at Unesco world heritage site

The dun sands of southern Peru, etched centuries ago with geoglyphs of a hummingbird, a monkey, an orca – and a figure some would dearly love to believe is an astronaut – have now revealed the form of an enormous cat lounging across a desert hillside.

The feline Nazca line, dated to between 200BC and 100BC, emerged during work to improve access to one of the hills that provides a natural vantage point from which many of the designs can be seen.

A Unesco world heritage site since 1994.

For quite a few years now, I’ve been writing in these pages that we are living in strange and peculiar – not to say, disturbing – times. I continually get reports of strange stories sent to me, and they seem to weirdly compliment some of the other things that appear as if by magick in these pages.

Enjoy.
The Nazca Lines, which are made up of hundreds of geometric and zoomorphic images, were created by removing rocks and earth to reveal the contrasting materials below. They lie 250 miles (400km) south of Lima and cover about 450 sq km (175 sq miles) of Peru’s arid coastal plain.

“The figure was scarcely visible and was about to disappear because it’s situated on quite a steep slope that’s prone to the effects of natural erosion,” Peru’s culture ministry said in a statement this week.

“Over the past week, the geoglyph was cleaned and conserved, and shows a feline figure in profile, with its head facing the front.” It said the cat was 37 metres long, with well-defined lines that varied in width between 30cm and 40cm.

“It’s quite striking that we’re still finding new figures, but we also know that there are more to be found,” Johny Isla, Peru’s chief archaeologist for the lines, told the Spanish news agency Efe.

“In a Twitter post, Penn Jillette of Penn & Teller called Randi "our inspiration, mentor and dear friend." He appeared on occasion on the duo’s Showtime doc series Penn & Teller: Bullshit!”

Randi died Tuesday "due to age-related causes," according to a post on the James Randi Educational Foundation website.

In 1956, The Amazing Randi appeared live on the Today show, surviving for 104 minutes in a sealed metal coffin submerged in a swimming pool to better a record held by Harry Houdini. Two decades later, he escaped from a straitjacket while suspended upside-down over Niagara Falls. The Toronto native also was a regular on the 1960s New York kids show Wonderama, played a dentist and an executioner on Alice Cooper's Billion Dollar Babies concert tour in the '70s, appeared as himself on a 1978 episode of Happy Days and wound up on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson more than 30 times.

Randi gave up magic and for several decades dedicated his life to exposing frauds. As such, he was the subject of An Honest Liar, a 2016 installment of the PBS documentary series Independent Lens. "I'm a liar, a cheat and a charlatan," Randi told The New York Times in 2001, "but at least I know it."

Born Randall James Hamilton Zwinge on Aug. 7, 1928, Randi dropped out of high school and left home at 17 to join a carnival. Much like Houdini before him, he could escape from ropes, handcuffs, leg irons, straitjackets, caskets, cages and blocks of ice. He also could levitate women and bend forks with his mind.
It is very difficult to be a journalist in these times with the story that is on everybody’s lips changing so rapidly. Each day I am receiving stories from all around the world; some from people I know, others from total strangers. This is undoubtedly the worst global crisis to happen in my lifetime, and I am 61 this year, and I think it’s going to be the biggest game changer at least since 9-11, and possibly since the end of the Second World War. Whatever happens during the unfolding crisis, nothing will ever be the same again.

I am not even going to attempt to keep an up-to-the-minute journal of events, but I would like to try and produce an ongoing oral history of what happens, and how – most importantly – it affects the readers of this magazine. Please grab me on Facebook, (using my personal account as Jonathan Downes, rather than the magazine account) or by email at jon@eclipse.co.uk if you want to contribute.
Covid Connections:
In praise of the Artists
from Chris White

Alan Dearling contacted his new-ish friend, Chris White, asking him for permission to share his poem, his Ode in Celebration of Artists and Creators. Those fab personages, who, especially in these Covid-ridden, Strange Times, are like Oscar Wilde, very much “…living in the gutters, Looking at stars”.

Chris is a multi-talented, innovative, quirky and creative writer and illustrator. Go and check out his works. As he says, it includes Words, Poems and Drawings…Doodles and Scribbles, Books…and much, much more. He hit the ground running with ‘Bitey the Veggie Vampire’ in 2000 and seems to never look back!

His website is filled with lots of juicy bits, vids and invitations to get involved, including ‘Create with Chris’ at his Youtube Channel. It’s crammed with fun, joy and wonderment:

Watchmen and Futurology

Alan Dearling muses:

Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons created Monsters and Gods in the ‘Watchmen’ saga. A graphic novel collection of epic scope. Caped-crusaders. Villains, heroes, vigilantes Ozymandias, aka the Egyptian pharaoh, Rameses II. In the ‘Watchmen’ saga, during his interview for the ‘Nova Express’ magazine, Veidt says:

“Futurology interests me perhaps more than any other single subject.”… “A new world is within our grasp, filled with unimaginable experiences and possibilities, if only we want it badly enough. Not a utopia…I don’t think that any species could continue to grow without some adversity…but a society with a more human basis, where the problems that beset us are at least new problems.”

‘Futurology’ is about possibilities. Dreams, fears, realities and unrealities. Comics in the twentieth and twenty-first centuries, are, to an extent, the fulfilment of dreams – a modern day equivalent of an opium for the people. The Futurology embedded in the linked, entwined tales of the ‘Watchmen’ are in a curious way a spin-off, a fabrication, based on one snippet from Bob Dylan, a song with the title, ‘All along the Watchtower’. Dylan’s words act as endpapers to a couple of the Watchmen fables, along with many references to contemporary songs.

It is both sad and shameful that when night falls and the setts of southern England stir, their gentle folk will be needlessly slaughtered. That in spite of science and public will, the wrath of ignorance will further bloody and bleed our countryside of its riches of life. That brutalist thugs, liars and frauds will destroy our wildlife and dishonour our nation's reputation as conservationists and animal lovers. I feel sick, sad, disempowered, betrayed, angry and crushed by the corruption of all that I know as right.

Gonzo Web Radio started off as a medium by which interviews and radio programmes about the various acts covered by Gonzo Multimedia could be broadcast to an eagerly attentive world.

But over the past few years, it has become more than that. We now host regular weekly shows by Neil Nixon, a lecturer in professional writing at North West Kent College who uses his weekly radio show, Strange Fruit, as a learning experience for his students on the Foundation Course. I’ve known Neil for years, and he approached me with the idea of syndicating his show.

I agreed, and then the floodgates opened. We have regular weekly shows from the mysterious M Destiny on the other side of the pond with Friday Night Progressive. We also have a regular visit to the world of the Canterbury Scene courtesy of our friend Matthew Watkins. There are several other shows in the wings, waiting to join us, so stay glued to your seats boys and girls, your life is never going to be the same again!

ME TRYING TO FIND GIRLS IN A PROG CONCERT
Strange Fruit is a unique two-hour radio show exploring the world of underground, strange and generally neglected music. All shows are themed and all shows set out to give the most hardened of sound-hounds some new delight to sample.

The show is also unique in providing homework for undergraduate students on North West Kent College’s Foundation Degree in Professional Writing (who dig up many of the odd facts featured in the links between tracks).

Neil Nixon, the founder and presenter of the show has released a book about rare albums for Gonzo Multimedia.

The show is broadcast on Miskin Radio every Sunday from 10-00-midnight.

I first came across Friday Night Progressive totally by accident, but I soon found myself beguiled by the style and taste of presenter M Destiny who presents a weekly two-hour show showcasing all sorts of progressive music that you are unlikely to hear anywhere else. This is surely a man after my own heart. I also very much approve of the way that it is the hub of a whole community of artists, musicians, and collaborators. I hope that you enjoy them as much as I do. Welcome aboard, chaps.

Hello, I am M Destiny host of Friday Night Progressive. You will find it to be an incredible independent internet broadcast show. But it’s more than that. We tend to boast that the musicians played on FNP are above the status quo. This includes the multi-instrumentalist and the educated musician. We tend to shy away from computer generated creations and rely on talent using musical instruments and steer this talent for purposes of sheer inspirational indulgence. It is only in the FNP chat room where you will find the most talented musicians packed at one time into such an honored space.

The Real Music Club has been a Brighton musical institution for over 15 years, founded by ‘Judge’ Trev Thoms, Tim Rundall and Stuart McKay as ‘Real Festival Music’ the idea was to bring the diverse styles of the anarchistic free music festivals indoors and to make sure the performers got paid. The club has always been run by a committee who decided on the acts that would be asked to play at the monthly shows and that meant that the music was as diverse as its members. I had been going to the club for a few years when Trev died and the loss of one of its founders was a bit of a setback. It did not put any shows on for a couple of months and, when I innocently said, ‘You can’t let it die down now’ I got asked to join the committee. One of the first things I suggested was that we ran a Radio Show and we were offered a weekly slot on Brighton and Hove Community Radio – a station that Judge Trev had helped set up.

I have been doing the weekly shows for nine years now and the main ideas behind them are to promote the live Real Music Club events by playing tracks for the participating artists and to find and play new and less mainstream music. I have had many guests on the show over those nine years and I usually ask them to bring in tracks that influenced them or that they particularly like and I talk to them about new releases and how they have got started in music.

It has normally gone out live from the BHCR studio but, during the Covid crisis, I have been recording the show at home. I still, however, do it as a live show. When I do the without guests I use tracks I have found or been sent and one of the other problems of the lockdown has been that I cannot browse the shelves of Resident Records in Brighton for new music. I often take a punt on something sometimes you hit lucky and find a new ‘Wow!’

This is a habit I got into back in the early 70s when I lived in Barking. Just down the hill from the station was a second hand record shop which had shelves of LPs marked ‘Not For Resale’. Obviously a reviewer lived in the area and was selling off the stuff they were sent. It was this way I found ‘Rupert Hine’, an artist I have liked all through his career and, in many ways, that find set the theme for how I seek out music for the show.

There are eight years of archive recordings you can browse (we lost the first couple of years when the archive got wiped):

Regular readers of my inky fingered scribblings, here and elsewhere, will have heard me talk about my old friend, Paul Rose. They will also be aware that, starting in 1993, Paul was the head honcho of the Channel 4 teletext video-games magazine, called Digitiser. Quite a few of Digitiser’s readers, including me and my mate Richard Freeman, had next to no interest in video games, but tuned in daily, just because of Biffo’s ridiculous humour.

Biffo and I became friends about thirteen years ago, and have collaborated on a few things since then.

The latest project from Biffo and his adorable wife, Sanja, is a podcast about Marillion. For those of whom are not in the know, Marillion are a long-standing British progressive rock band, and – also for those of you not in the know – my late wife Corinna once went on a date with their drummer, many years before meeting and marrying me.

So, with all these personal and professional links, how could I not add Mr and Mrs Biffo’s new project to the Gonzo Web Radio section in this esteemed magazine?

And you know what, readers? I have done just that!

Ray Pennington was an American country music singer, songwriter, and record producer. He is known for writing the song "I'm a Ramblin' Man", and for founding the independent Step One Records label. Pennington first performed in a western swing band called the Western Rhythm Boys, which performed in Ohio. In 1958, he signed with King Records and released "Three Hearts in a Tangle" under the name Ray Starr. However, Pennington was dissatisfied with the recording, so he asked that it be withdrawn as a single. Pennington then took up record producer and artists and repertoire jobs at the label, including a production credit on Hawkshaw Hawkins' final album, Lonesome 7-7203, one of the first country albums to feature both black and white session musicians.

Pennington died on October 7, 2020, at his home in Hendersonville, Tennessee. He was 86, and died after entering a garage.

David ben Ami (nicknamed "Dadi" from an early age) was born to one of the founding families of the Nahalal moshav. In his youth, he studied drama with the theater director and acting teacher Nola Chilton. He served in the IDF in the Southern Command Band and the Northern Command Band. After his release from the army, he studied theater studies at Tel-Aviv University and worked as an actor in the Cameri Theater.

For many years, he abandoned his musical career and focused on anthologizing ancient Chassidic melodies from the elderly people of the Meah Shearim neighborhood in Jerusalem, which he performed in his albums from 1988 onwards. He stated, "My mission is to endow the songs and to perpetuate the melodies." In his appearances he performed Israeli songs, and in one of his later albums he sings Israeli songs and tunes that were inspired prior to the establishment of the State of Israel.

David ben Ami contracted COVID-19 during the pandemic in Israel. He was hospitalized on October 7, 2020, when his health conditions worsened. He died on October 9, 2020, at the age of 70.

Johnny Bush
(1935 – 2020)

Bush was an American country music singer, songwriter, and musician. Nicknamed the "Country Caruso", Bush was best known for his distinctive voice and for writing the song "Whiskey River", a top 10 hit for himself which also became the signature song of fellow country artist Willie Nelson. He was especially popular in his native Texas.

With the success of his recent Botox treatments for his vocal condition and his successful career revival, Bush was a spokesman for people afflicted with vocal disorders. In 2002, he was honored with the Annie Glenn Award, named for Annie Glenn, by the National Council of Communicative Disorders.

Dave Munden
(1944-2020)

The Tremeloes are an English beat group founded in 1958 in Dagenham, Essex. They initially found success in the British Invasion era with lead singer Brian Poole, scoring a UK chart-topper in 1963 with "Do You Love Me". After Poole's departure in 1966, the band achieved further success as a four-piece with 13 Top 40 hits on the UK Singles Chart between 1967 and 1971 including "Here Comes My Baby", "Even the Bad Times Are Good", "(Call Me) Number One", "Me and My Life" and their most successful single "Silence Is Golden".

Their drummer, Dave Munden, played with the group from 1958 until he retired in 2018 following injuries sustained in a fall. He died in October 2020 of a respiratory infection aged 76.
Haskell was an English musician and songwriter. A pop, rock and blues vocalist, guitarist, and bassist, he was a school friend of King Crimson guitarist Robert Fripp, the two first working together in Fripp's mid-1960s teenage group the League of Gentlemen (not to be confused with Fripp's later new wave band). Haskell first gained recognition as bass player for the British band The Fleur de Lys, and subsequently spent a short period in King Crimson, singing one of the songs on their second album and both singing and playing bass on their third album. After departing from King Crimson, he continued his musical career as a solo musician, finally gaining international recognition in 2001 with his hit song "How Disorders for his work in bringing attention to the condition of spasmodic dysphonia. (1948 - 2020)

Kondo was an avant-garde jazz and jazz fusion trumpeter.

Kondo attended Kyoto university in 1967, and became close friends with percussionist Tsuchitori Toshiyuki. In 1972 the pair left university, and Toshiyuki went on to work with Peter Brook, while Kondo joined Yosuke Yamashita. In 1978 he moved to New York, and began performing with Bill Laswell, John Zorn, Fred Frith, and Eraldo Bernocchi. A year later he released his first recording, toured Europe with Eugene Chadbourne, and collaborated with European musicians such as Peter Brotzman. Returning to Japan, he worked with Ryuichi Sakamoto, Kazumi Watanabe, and Herbie Hancock. In the mid-1980s he began focusing on his own career, blending his avant-garde origins with electronic music. In 2002, he worked on an international peace festival in Hiroshima after being approached by the Dalai Lama about organizing one. He was a former member of Praxis. Kondo cooperated with Bill Laswell to make the album Inamorata in 2007.

On October 17, 2020, he died in Kawasaki City, aged 71.

The Chad Mitchell Trio – later known as The Mitchell Trio – were a North American vocal group who became known during the 1960s. They performed traditional folk songs and some of their own compositions. They were particularly notable for performing satirical songs that criticized current events during the time of the cold war, the civil rights movement, and the Vietnam War, in a less subtle way than the typical folk music and singer-songwriter musicians of their time. Mitchell left the trio in 1965 to embark on a solo singing career. Another audition process replaced him with the young (and unknown) singer/songwriter John Denver. The group retained the well-known "Mitchell Trio" name, with Denver writing some of the group’s songs.

When Mark E Smith died in January 2018, an era ended with him. The Fall were an English post-punk band, formed in 1976 in Prestwich, Greater Manchester. They underwent many line up changes, with vocalist and founder Smith as the only constant member. First associated with the late 1970s punk movement, the Fall’s music underwent numerous stylistic changes, often concurrently with changes in the group’s lineup. Nonetheless, their music has generally been characterised by an abrasive, repetitive guitar-driven sound, tense bass and drum rhythms, and Smith’s caustic lyrics, described by critic Simon Reynolds as “a kind of Northern English magic realism that mixed industrial grime with the unearthly and uncanny, voiced through a unique, one-note delivery somewhere between amphetamine-spiked rant and alcohol-addled yarn.” They were always at their best on stage, and this collection captures them in full flow.

Barrie Guard & David Cunningham
“Zina”

Label: Gonzo
Release Date: 24th July 2020
Catalogue Number: HST522CD
Barcode: 5056083206209
Format: CD Album

Zina is a 1985 award-winning film directed by Ken McMullen. It tells a story of a twentieth century Antigone, Zinaida Volkova (Domiziana Giordano), daughter of Leon Trotsky. In 1930s Berlin, Zina is being treated by the Adlerian psychotherapist Professor Arthur Kronfeld (Ian McKellen). During this psychoanalysis, which includes some hypnosis, she recalls incidents both from her own life and that of her father, as a leader of the Russian Revolution, as the holder of state power and later in exile.

David Cunningham is a composer and music producer from Northern Ireland. He is probably best known to a rock and roll audience for his work with the massively peculiar experimental band 'The Flying Lizards' but from about 1993, Cunningham began to make installations in which sounds within an architectural space were picked up by a microphone and then fed back into the space; the presence of an audience altered both the shape of the space and the sounds within it. A work of this type, The Listening Room, was installed in the Queen's Powder Magazine on Goat Island in Sydney Harbour during the Sydney Biennale of 1998. Barrie Guard however is a British composer known for working in a more conventional medium. What happens when these two composers work together? You will just have to listen to this extraordinarily emotive album to find out.

An evocative and atmospheric first collection of solo piano improvisations: "Bainbridge's style is contemporary, yet imbued with the dynamic spirit of Ravel and Debussy, with a thrilling dash of Bill Evans... an album that's pure class from first note to last" (Prog Magazine).

"Ever since studying music, art and art history as teenager I've been fascinated by the French Impressionist movement, both in art and music. The idea of capturing a fleeting scene, a brief moment in time, or a feeling evoked by a place or a person, has resonated with me throughout my musical life. Most people can link powerful memories to a certain piece of music, a picture, an aroma. Even when my mam was unable to remember words or people's names as Alzheimer's took hold, she was still able to remember how to play tunes on her accordion. In a sense, all the pieces on this album are impressions, a brief moment in time interpreted through the medium of music."

If there is such a thing as British folk music royalty, then Eliza Carthy is undoubtedly the Princess Royal. She is the daughter of English folk musicians singer/guitarist Martin Carthy and singer Norma Waterson, and started making her own mark on the scene at the age of thirteen. Carthy formed the Waterdaughters with her mother, aunt (Lal Waterson) and cousin Marry Waterson. She has subsequently worked with Nancy Kerr, with her parents as Waterson–Carthy, and as part of the "supergroup" Blue Murder, in addition to her own solo work. She has twice been nominated for the Mercury Music Prize for UK album of the year: in 1998 for Red Rice, and again in 2003 for Anglicana. Carthy was a guest on the album Mermaid Avenue by Billy Bragg and Wilco. Eliza and Billy also recorded together on the song "My Father's Mansions" which appeared on the Pete Seeger tribute album called Where Have All The Flowers Gone (1998). And in 2014, she was awarded the honour of an MBE for services to folk music in the Queen's Birthday Honours. This very precious collection of her demos provides an exclusive peek behind the scenes at the creative process of this most extraordinary and important artist and composer.

When Mark E Smith died in January 2018, an era ended with him. The Fall were an English post-punk band, formed in 1976 in Prestwich, Greater Manchester. They underwent many line up changes, with vocalist and founder Smith as the only constant member. First associated with the late 1970s punk movement, the Fall's music underwent numerous stylistic changes, often concurrently with changes in the group's lineup. Nonetheless, their music has generally been characterised by an abrasive, repetitive guitar-driven sound, tense bass and drum rhythms, and Smith's caustic lyrics, described by critic Simon Reynolds as "a kind of Northern English magic realism that mixed industrial grime with the unearthly and uncanny, voiced through a unique, one-note delivery somewhere between amphetamine-spiked rant and alcohol-addled yarn." They were always at their best on stage, and this collection captures them in full flow.

Fantastic!

Now, I don't know whether this is a good idea, a bad idea, or just an idea, but - as I believe you know - this magazine is put out each week on a budget of £25, and is free. It will remain free, but I would like to be able to generate some income so I can pay our contributing writers. So, 'why not flog Gonzo Weekly T Shirts?' I thought. 'Why not', I answered...

A Few Facts About Plastic Pollution

Enough plastic is thrown away each year to circle the Earth 4 times!

ONE MILLION sea birds & 100,000 marine mammals are killed annually from plastic in our oceans.

Plastic constitutes approximately 90% of all trash floating on the ocean.

The average American throws away approximately 185 LBS of plastic per year.

50% of the plastic we use, we use JUST ONCE and throw away.

WARNING: Trigger Alert...
Over the next couple of weeks I am going to be starting a crowd funding appeal to help me raise fund towards the costs of bringing Nadine home for burial and towards a trip to Ireland to sort some things out plus a memorial. Any remaining funds will go towards a vision we have for a charity-based community where liked minded people and people in need can come to be safe and a part of something, so watch for Deanie’s Place. I just want to close by saying this:

In the 19 years I had with Nadine and the many years so many of us had being touched by her beautiful soul, it is something none of us will ever forget. I believe no one ever truly leaves us and she is still so very close as that energy is infinite. All you have to do is think of her and she will be right at your side, allowing you to feel that special energy she brings.

Till I see you again my Deano,
I Love you always, In all ways,
We all love you. Fly safe and free now...
Also sending love out to Rokas, Nadine’s Mum, Amanda and all her family and friends in Ireland.

On behalf of Myself, Andrea, Rowan, Larissa, Cerys, Chloe, My dad, Daphne, Scott and Gary.

I leave yu with this, For Deanie...

-Late on Friday/early Saturday I lost my daughter Nadine. She chose to leave on her own terms which has left her whole family, Fiancé and friends wondering why. This has left us all devastated and in total shock.

Deanie, as I nicknamed her, was very much like me and, because of that, we shared a special bond. I will always remember her bubbly fun-loving nature and her love of Ducks and Panda’s. For the last 12 years she was living in Ireland with her mother, except for a brief spell living with us in north Devon, a time that will always remain special in my heart. I could talk for hours with stories of things we all got up to and how she considered me her best friend as well as her dad.

In the last couple of years, she was in a relationship with a wonderful young man, who it has only just been my pleasure to speak with. They were making some big plans for the coming years and had recently got a dog and kitten.

The issues with the pandemic stopped us going over to Ireland to visit with Deanie and Rokas and also my other daughters Larissa and Cerys. So, the only contact I have had with them is via social media, which has made this so critical to me but, it is no match for being face to face and hugging someone, something I miss dearly.

There is an important message here, Mental Health issues are very real and come in many forms. They can remain hidden, even from those closest and most loved. Please make sure you hug those closest to you all the time and never stop talking. If there is even the slightest hint of anything wrong, then seek out the right help as quickly as you can. It is so important, especially now in these uncertain times. Don’t put it off till next week or feel you don’t have the time. Statistics for those taking their own lives are rising and we to help bring them down.
Alan Dearling shares some of the words and images from his friend, Lizzy, who has been having a real downer, BUT she is still full of ranting life. Angry, resentful…but I feel that she speaks for many in UK. The Forgotten Many, who feel lonely and helpless. But her words and those of many like her, are a sign of the times. She needs our support. She possesses a real VOICE, simultaneously vulnerable and powerful. Lizzy and her generation, and their children are our future…Words and Images… Food for Thought and Thoughtful-ness. I invite you to get know the Real Lizzy.
Lizzy tells us that she is:

“...trapped in the prison of poverty, and it’s gotten me feeling worthless feeling cursed wondering if things could ever get worse, desperately grab my purse but i ain't even got a penny, the leccys about to run out and the cupboards are fucking empty, so let’s see, how to pull through feel new grasp a new angle on life... find a way out of the stress and the strife, just whatever you do don’t go reaching for the knife wrote that a while ago got many more lol ... FUCKTHESYSTEM.”

“...they say the only way is up, when you reach rock bottom, but i feel like there's no coming back for me feel like my heart is rotten... wrap me up in cotton wool cos babe i feel so broken... and the days go by hoping the phone will ring but i feel like I've been forgotten... all the mates i used to kick around with, baby they're all long gone...and i sit here wondering to myself how did it all go so wrong... try to write rhymes that are positive and nice but inside my mind's so dark, reminiscing ‘bout when i used to be a teen, carefree drinking in the park, bunking school down the power sta-tion, getting blazed up before class, blim holes covered on my shirt and tie, short skirt ripping holes on the thighs of my tights, rejecting authority, screaming at the teachers tryna control me, but look where it’s gotten me, 30 years old no qualifications or job prosperity! #stay.in.school.kids”

Lizzy says that she is:
“...sick and tired of feeling sick and tired now you can’t even sleep from the overthinking you’re so wired, memories of things you seen things you could have been just won’t let me be... life’s falling apart at the seams! so you sit looking in the mirror feeling like a sinner, no longer a winner same sad eyes just now sunken and thinner, try to force down some dinner, but nothing tastes the same, with every bite, you’re thinking of all the pain, watching your hopes and dreams spiralling down the drain you just don’t feel the same and you’re the only one to blame, it’s you who lost your way, you who fucked your brain, you who went insane, and now it’s you who has to pay! depression and anxiety bubbling up inside of me feeling like a limbless zombie stuck in quicksand, can’t bring myself to stand,” and i just don’t understand, this isn’t what i had planned..."

Lizzy writes lyrics, and is sometimes dancer and a singer with the band, ‘Reality Attack’. She plans on getting a solo act together bringing to us some consciousness-raising and controversial songs and raps! Here’s another of her rap-rhymes:

“...dreaming of a life where i can be free, travelling all over the lands and the seas yes i wanna be free! wanna explore the wonders of the world, collections of treasures and diamonds and pearls, and just do what i wanna! all of the places i wanna go, all of the faces i wanna know, all of the food that i wanna try and just forget about the times that i wish i could die, wanna fill my life with positive thoughts, no more sorrow and wallowing in the dark, no more depression and anxiety just happy and free is where i wanna be! you know they say that time is meant to be a healer, but i know that after time things don’t get any easier, you know they say that time is meant to heal, but i know that after time the pain it still feels real, tryna keep your head above the water, tryna keep your feet on solid ground, all the chaos and madness surrounds us, a little piece of mind you haven’t found, but i know that we will be alright, yes i know that we will be just fine!”

Lizzy can get angry, frustrated, alienated and in danger:
“// stuck on the same page, heart full of rage, my brain so deranged// just wish i could change// never ending spiral, wanting to be mindful// chewed up spat out feeling like a fool!/ like a broken tool dump my body in the pool// take me away, i’m feeling far from cool// too much overthinking, too much heavy drinking// uncontrollable emotional, every day i’m sinking// harder darker faster tomato my brains turned to mush feel like a disaster// tryna master this game of life// but the pain cuts deep like the blade of a knife// wanna spread my wings and fly//don’t wanna break down and cry// so i look up to the sky and i promise i’ll try//to get a little better// still tryna forget ya// you fucked me up so hard now i’m far from the centre// living on the edge crawling out of a hedge// tip-toeing closer to the window ledge, of a skyscraper// as my thoughts they taper disconjointed bundled up in a ball full of wool// tryna stay positive, but negative energy always pulls// i’m not allowed to be happy, my days are always crappy// and by the end of the night... my demons they snap me// happy slap me coming down like a ton of bricks// dwelling on, the fucking pricks, who fucked me over// now i’m growing colder gonna run myself a bath and jump in with a toaster! //this ain't supposed to be the way my life turned out// I'm tired of this rollercoaster// i wanna jump out! wanna scream and shout// screw up my face and pout mundane life got me feeling so down! //”

Alan writes: To understand the ‘Real Lizzy’, this note from her about her daughter, Poppy, allows us a peek into her private world. A world where love and devotion, pride, fear, self-loathing, pain, hope and bravery intertwine:

“Before i had her i was on the road to destruction...no self-worth, anorexic tendencies and smashing every substance going then once i was preggers it was like a light switching on and then looked after meself proply n ting i feel so blessed everyday having my wonderful girl she’s my proper best m8 💘💘”

Alienated, lonely and sometimes beyond hope, in a slough of despair, Lizzy tells us, she:
Alan says: "As I have got to know Lizzy better, I’ve asked her more questions about her life, and how she has arrived at her current situation with all its challenges. Her life is frequently an over-powering, emotional and heart-rending, roller-coaster ride.... Here are some fragments of what Lizzy told me:"

"My parents raised me as a hare krishna and I was given the name Lalita by a guru.... i got heavily into LSD at 15 and after 6 months got sectioned.... thinking my life was like the Truman show with hidden cameras everywhere (watching my every move), but luckily I slowly came back to reality!.... funny thing is: my initials are LSD lizzy sarah dalzell 😄"
Lizzy told Alan: “I wrote this next one after the Westminster attack and bearing in mind the twin towers!”

“a nation under attack, or a nation getting attacked by its own government? a secret slaughter of people, innocent, and insignificant, they’re tryna keep us all on edge, tryna keep us all in a state of fear, they want us all to nod along and agree, till what they want is near! terror-threat level severe? Don’t make me laugh, your plan’s a fucking farce you can’t white-wash me i refuse to adhere, don’t believe the hype don’t buy into the fear! deployment of piggies packing heat on the street and with a nation on its knees it screams yes please! too many convenient coincidences leave you unable to question, you wouldn’t believe what can be done with the power of suggestion, they’re tryna strip us bare, strip us bear of all our freedom, all the while the sheeple nod along and agree with them!

take a look inside your mind, come and see what you will find, take a look inside your mind, come and see what you will find... battling demons don’t feel like a free man trapped in the system, wanna run away to fairy land, cos they tryna push us down, now we gotta stand our ground ppl unite in every city every town no we won’t bow down to your crown, time for the elite to fucking drown, gonna flip their table upside down, they pump the lies they pump the fear, eyes of the wise are filled with tears they been tryna crush us down for years don’t let the bullshit fill your ears, fucked up society is fucked up, but their time is nearly up, they runnin out of luck, more and more ppl don’t give a fuck! take a look inside your mind, don’t bow down to the lies, yes the tears fill our eyes, they tryna segregate us break social ties ! ppl walkin round the street with their heads lookin down at their feet, no eye contact or smiles anymore, muzzles on tight looking down at the floor! take a look inside ur mind, don’t let them brainwash you with lies, it’s time for ppl to rise stand tall stand proud stand together and shine!"

“MaSSiVe ThanK YoU to everyone for giving me so much love and support in my dark times 💕❤️❤️ what doesn’t kill you makes you stronger and when life gives you lemons make lemonade, so I’m sat here feeling hench as fuck, drinking some banging lemonade 😊😊😊😊😊

The ReW & WhO? Show and the world of virtual Open Mics and Folk Clubs.

What do musicians, singer-songwriters and poets do in Covid-19 lockdowns when venues are closed and there are no opportunities for gigs? An increasing number, myself included, have taken to the virtual stage. Livestreaming is the new way of keeping music live. The ReW & WhO? open mic show from New York City is a regular event where this happens, and I have become one of its regular performers.

Hosted by Rew Starr, a singer-songwriter, actress and media-star, and James Lane, Green Party activist and bass-player in Elefant Killer, ReW & WhO? has attracted an ever-growing audience and team of performers. The show is open to seasoned professionals and newcomers alike, and combines chat between performances with a very wide range of musical styles and poetry too. It is very organic and unrehearsed. No one knows who will show up or exactly what will happen. This means that every show is full of surprises and that is one of the attractions of ReW & WhO?

When I first took part I was immediately impressed with the obvious talents of other performers, so it came as no surprise to me that many of them have had noteworthy careers. I’d like to tell you about some of my new friends, and why I feel so much a part of the New York community of musicians even though I am based in Portugal.

I was introduced to Rew by Paul Richmond aka Zest Radio Show, whom I have known for many years. Zest, as he is affectionately known, is often on the show playing drum pads to various rock classics.

Crowned “Miss Underground NYC,” Rew has been called a "Firebrand " by the New York Times, and her music has a New Wave punkiness to it. Think Blondie with more of a singer-songwriter touch to the songs. Rew can really rock when fronting a band like The Rewlettes or the Rewd Onez, or like a female Neil...
Young, she can switch to performing songs with acoustic guitar for self-penned numbers, as well as playing a range of covers. Rew has also appeared on stage with many famous acts in her career, including the late great Alan Merrill.

Donald Sztabnik, aka Don BlackCat, always plays "love songs," these days, not traditional ballad style love songs, but love songs in Don Blackcat style! He is a brilliant guitarist and a prolific songwriter, with a touch of Lou Reed about his performance that has its background in venues like the legendary CBGB, and the New York rock music scene.

Stephen Friedland, aka Brute Force, has an amazing story. At the tail-end of the 1960s, he was discovered by George Harrison and John Lennon of The Beatles, and they wanted Brute released on the Apple label. This was because of his song The King of Fuh, and it did get a limited pressing on Apple. Very sadly EMI/Capitol wouldn’t distribute it, and radio stations refused to play the song. The King of Fuh got pulled just when it looked all set for Brute to get his really big break that would have catapulted him to international stardom. His career suffered this terrible setback because of the taboo of using the F-word even though the song doesn’t actually use it, though it appears to be in the line: “All hail the Fuh King.” Undeterred by his past, the now 80-year-old Brute hasn’t lost his creative muse, and (excuse pun) is truly a force to be reckoned with! Brute is currently plugging his Planetwork and “Pledge of Allegiance to the Planet.” He is pointing out that wherever we are we are all living on the Planet Earth, so we should pledge our allegiance to it and the universe it is in. There is an album and a poster for the Pledge, and Brute says he wants to see it in homes, schools and businesses. It could change the world, and I have got mine!

Other notable musicians that are regulars on the ReW & WhO? show include singer-songwriters Dennis Doyle, Michael G. Potter, Rock ‘n’ Roll Johnny Bod, Ondine PM, Joel Landy, Cheri Dahl, Ray Galindo, and Stupid Maynard.

Mimsey Mack is another very talented performer and a regular on Rew’s show. Described as “Sheryl Crow meets Pink,” Mimsey has just released a new song video entitled Redemption, and she recently played the very successful Hope & Power event in Brooklyn. Rew Starr and the Rewd Onez and many other musicians took part in this live music show, keeping music live in NY despite the pandemic but making sure that masks were worn and social distancing in place. Tucky Parkis was one of them and she plays bass, keyboards and sings. Tucky is a regular at ReW & WhO?, and has very kindly offered to produce a new version of my song Real Love and Communication with contributions from other members of the ReW & WhO? Community. Now I want to go to NY to meet all my new friends and record this with them.

Yvonne Sotomayor is a bilingual poet who performs passionate poetry in English and Spanish, backed on guitar by her partner, Kenn Rowell. Kenn is a singer-songwriter and always treats us to a song or two of his own as well.

Some performers are not regulars but they do drop by from time to time. Lynda Kraar is one of these and I met her at ReW & WhO?. Lynda is a singer, guitar, bass and mandolin player and music teacher. She has been in various bands and performs solo. Lynda introduced me to Philippa Bacal, who organises the Jerusalem Folk Music Evenings, as the name suggests from Jerusalem. I have enjoyed taking part in this online event, and it was there that I met Art Grossman. He runs Reading Community Coffeehouse, and I have also had the pleasure of performing at this virtual folk club too. My Butterfly In My Beard has proved popular at all these events, and I have shown the performers and audiences how to “make a butterfly.”

I discovered the Cambridge Folk Club virtual stage whilst browsing at Facebook, and was pleased to see an online music show happening in the UK. Being the Bard of Ely, I couldn’t resist explaining that I hold the title for Ely in Cardiff not the one in Cambridge. Cambridge Folk Club had a tip jar and they share any donations that come in. They sent me a £5 payment for my two songs, which just goes to show that it is still possible to earn money as a musician despite the lockdowns, and have a good time whilst doing so. And I didn’t spend it all at the virtual bar because there wasn’t one!

instrumentalists, as he is best-known for providing not only keyboards and guitar, but also saxophone, which is often the lead instrument, and when combined with traditional percussion really has a major impact on the sound.

While the album is based in jazz or fusion, there is also a large degree of world music and progressive rock, especially RIO, as it combines all these seamlessly so that it becomes all-encompassing and definitely takes the listener into a world that may not always be melodic, but is certainly always dynamic and powerful. The music swells, retreats, comes forward again, and the listener is never really sure what is going to happen next. The album itself can be broken down into three distinct sections. ‘Drip’, is an 8 part suite for saxophone, electric guitar and bass, while the second group (‘/’ perhaps?) contains three pieces of more length with the same instruments plus two added percussions in a darker progressive style. The final section, ‘Culebra’ itself, is a more textural suite of four pieces with saxophones, with lots of found and traditional percussions, bass and guitars.
Overall, this is a really interesting album which contains a lot of depth, which while not always mainstream is guaranteed to take the listener on an interesting sonic experience.

KILL NO ALBATROSS
SPEAK TRUE EVIL EP
INDEPENDENT

There are only four songs on this EP, with a total playing time of sixteen minutes, but there is enough here to demonstrate that this band from Brighton, Ontario, have a great going for them. They can be gentle and melodic when they wish to be, channelling the likes of Alter Bridge, where singer/guitarist Kyle Collins has the ability to shine with loads of space and gentle accompaniment (for the most part, anyway), but there are others such as “Apex Predator” where they really hit hard. Stone Sour have to be an influence for these guys, but Killswitch Engage are also making their presence felt, plus Avenged Sevenfold.

It is interesting to notice that as well as Kyle there are two other guitarists, so although there is some restraint in the studio I can imagine that these guys kick up quite a storm on stage. They are mixing multiple styles of metal together, along with some elements that would normally be thought of as being more progressive, to create an EP that is certainly whetting my appetite for a full album. It is certainly worth a listen, and is currently available to download for just $3 CAD,

I was looking through the band’s website trying to find out more information about the band, and then realised that they were showing an advertisement for a gig which took place four years ago, when they were performed with both Collage and SBB! They describe it as “Three bands, three generations and a shared passion for music” and it must have been an incredible night – now if only someone had a recording, as SBB and Collage are definitely two of my very favourite Polish bands. Mind you, somehow I think I might be adding Lebowski to that list. As is implied by the album title, this is a live album, but strangely this is seven years on from their only other album to date, plus there have been a couple of singles. Much of the material on this 2017 album hasn’t been released prior to this, but their site shows that they gig quite a lot, so it
Lucia Jackson, who was born in New York, grew up in Madrid, Spain where she started singing when she was ten. She studied voice and piano at the prestigious Escuela de Musica Creativa when she was 13 and also ballet and flamenco at the Professional Dance Conservatory. Returning to New York when she was 18, she has since danced with the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre as a guest student, at the Jacobs Pillow Dance Festival and, as a member of FJK Dance, toured China for two months. As a jazz singer, she has performed with many groups including the Bud Maltin Orchestra, Marty Schwartz, and the Art Lillard Big Band. With a great deal of encouragement from her family and fans, she has now released her debut album through her father’s label. Her father is of course Ron Jackson, a very well-known guitarist in the jazz scene, and he is one of the musicians working with her on this, as well as arranging all the songs and also producing the album. Her vocals are sublime, with a soft touch, which brings in nuances of Latin and Caribbean styles with her vocals always very much to the fore. Most of the songs are standards from the likes of Cole Porter, Frank Sinatra and Duke Ellington, but the one that stands out more than the rest is an incredible arrangement of “And I Love Him”.

With the lyrics amended just ever so slightly from the Lennon/McCartney classic, it is the arrangement and vocals that really make this shine. Lucia’s voice has just a small amount of reverb, the song has been taken at a far slower pace than usual, and she is accompanied just by her father Ron on a steel 7 string guitar which is picked delicately.

This is an outstanding version, and one of the finest Beatles covers I have ever come across, and is worth getting the CD just on the basis of that one song alone. But, this late night jazz album is a delight throughout, and one that is surely set to allow her to
MAGNOLIA
CON FUOCO
LIZARD RECORDS

Italian progressive act Magnolia can trace their roots all the way back to 1994, but split up in 2000 only to reform in 2010. Their debut full-length album, ‘La Zona d’Ombra’ was released in 2012, with ‘Con Fuoco’ following in 2017. Although Chiara Gironi sings in Italian, the booklet contains lyrics both in Italian and English, and the digipak itself is packed full of photographs, which makes it a really nice package. Apart from the lyrics they certainly don’t sound like an Italian band, but have been taking their inspiration more from the likes of Porcupine Tree, the Gathering, Anathema and modern Marillion, as opposed to the more “traditional” bombastic classical symphonic Italian style.

There are quite large elements of neo prog in their music, so they are definitely quite removed from many other Italian progressive bands. There are times when they do go quite over the top, and Gironi can be quite strident when she wishes to be, but it is when the band are more reflective and pick at the guitars that they have the most power, definitely a “less is more” approach. The whole album, both musically and presentation wise, is incredibly professional and while never really reaching the realms of being indispensable it is still an enjoyable release.

THE MODERN ACT OF SETTING ABLAZE
NUCLEAR BLAST

Northern Germany’s feral two piece Mantar are the product of a twenty year friendship between guitarist/vocalist Hanno Klaenhardt and drummer/vocalist Erinc Sakarya. Anyone notice what is missing? They proudly state that there is no bass guitar on this album, and that it is only the two of them – mind you my ears are telling me that there is either a bass at work in places or a down-tuned guitar doing the same thing. But, here we have a duo who have taken early 90’s Darkthrone and are bringing it into the modern age, black metal with plenty of anger and venom which also owes a debt to the mighty Anaal Nathrakh. Apparently neither musician considers themselves to be a metalhead, with Hanno coming to the music from punk, while Erick is a strong Sisters of Mercy fan. None of this has stopped them from producing some quite brutal music.

This is black metal at its most violent and angry; there is no room for Burzum-style atmospherics here, it is all about putting the guitars in your face and then pounding them hard. Only one song breaches the five minute mark, as they declare “Riffs, riffs, riffs are the only hard currency for Mantar - simple as fuck - that’s what I like,” says Hanno. They certainly achieve that, with a black metal/punk hybrid that is hard-hitting and always in your face. This is their third album in just four years, and are playing live wherever they can, and are showing no sign at all of slowing down just yet.

METAL ALLEGIANCE
VOLUME II – POWER DRUNK MAJESTY
NUCLEAR BLAST

Normally when one hears about a group of musicians who have put together a side project there is a collective groan, but some four years after they first started playing together, and with their second album, there is a real risk that people will start taking Metal Allegiance seriously, and so they should. The core of the band is Alex Skolnick (guitar, Testament), Mark Menghi (bass), Mike Portnoy (drums, Dream Theater and so many, many more), Dave Ellefson (bass), and they treat this as a band as opposed to a project, with the songs written in a room together as opposed to long distance. “We don’t just phone it in,” bassist and cofounder David Ellefson explains. “These are real songs, written by real humans, in the same room. As complicated as it often makes our lives to do that, it’s a real band.” “We wrote these songs, in my basement, playing them in rehearsals before we ever hit record,” adds drummer and cofounder Mike Portnoy. “It’s important to stress that this isn’t one of those email projects where everybody just sends files back and forth. Like a garage band, each of these songs began with playing together, banging it out, old school.”

So, no singer among them, but that isn’t an issue when you have friends like Trevor Strnad (The Black Dahlia Murder), John Bush (Armored Saint), Bobby “Blitz” Ellsworth (Overkill), Mark Tornillo (Accept), Johan Hegg (Amon Amarth), Max Cavalera (Soulfly), Mark Osegueda (Death Angel) and Floor Jansen (Nightwish) to call on. And if that wasn’t enough, Skolnick’s virtuoso, tasteful and melodic lead guitar work is joined by guest soloists who represent a wide spectrum of generations and styles: Andreas Kisser (Sepultura), who regularly appears with Metal Allegiance live; Nita Strauss (Alice Cooper), and the one-time guitar teacher for a pre-Testament teenaged Alex Skolnick, Joe Satriani. Although the use of different singers can provide some distraction, this does definitely feel like a classic thrash album which is out to take no prisoners. If they are to release anything as a single then it has to be closer “Power Drunk Majesty Part Two” where Floor shows yet again what a consummate professional she is by laying down some incredible vocal melodies that take the song to a new level while the guys beneath her aren’t pulling any punches with some great guitar and stunning bass. Everyone involved is giving it their all, and this is a metal album worthy of investigation by anyone who likes to bounce the noggin.

THE COMPLETE GOSPELS

The Gospels evolved because Rick Wakeman was asked to perform at an organ recital to raise money for the Camberley United Reform Church, which was in desperate need of a new organ. Rick pondered what to play and the more he thought about it and what the evening should mean, the more he felt that something very special was about to take place.

Thoughts of the New Testament kept creeping into his mind and he decided to write an instrumental piece to the settings of the four Gospels. He began working but after a couple of hours realised that there was no way he was going to get across the feelings he wished to portray without singing. The music seemed to cry out for an operatic tenor.

Amazingly enough, just a few weeks earlier, Rick had met the famous tenor Ramon Remedios at a charity concert in which they both performed and he plucked up courage to ask him if he would kindly agree to perform the New Gospels with him. The concert was a tremendous success and Ramon’s feeling and understanding of the music moved many people to tears.

The complete Gospels is a limited edition box set containing all the known recordings of the project both audio and visual. Along with a reproduction A4 x 12 page concert program.

Special Limited Edition Boxset containing Signed by Rick Wakeman and numbered certificate.
DVD containing over 2 hours of footage including an in-depth interview with Rick about the project.
Double CD1, The Original Gospels - with Robert Powell as the Narrator.
Double CD2, The New Gospels

One of my favourite films is the Matrix. Not Matrix Reloaded, or Matrix Revolutions—which are just glorified cowboy movies with special effects and philosophy—but the original Matrix.

What I like is the theme of the movie, that the world is a computer-generated illusion.

At one point the character Morpheus speaks to Keanu Reeves’ Neo, after he has been released from the controlling power of the machines. He shows him the battered landscape of a post-apocalyptic world, beneath a boiling sky. “Welcome to the desert of the real,” he says.

It’s a great line, spoken with relish by Laurence Fishburne, who plays Morpheus.

When I saw the movie for the first time it struck me that it was an allegory of the state we live in.

How do we know what it real and what is not?

Contemporary neuroscience tells us that what we perceive as real is only a three-dimensional hologram happening in the brain. It is a perception of reality, not reality itself.

This is made more complicated by the fact that this secondary perception—this perception of perception—is filtered through ever more evolved and remote processes: such as language, such as culture, such as art, through the beliefs we share and the conceptual baggage we accumulate to interpret it all.

“Conceptual baggage.” That’s a good phrase. It brings to mind a perpetual tourist on a never-ending journey to a nonexistent package holiday, getting to yet another transit point during yet another change of transportation, dragging along a trolley full of the accumulated baggage of his compulsively acquired souvenir-collection. Which is how I sometimes feel about myself. Always on a journey, never arriving anywhere.

Meanwhile there’s ever increasing volumes of pointlessness to contend with. Like TV for instance.

BIG BROTHER

Most of us in the modern world have been brought up with TV. We spend large amounts of our day sitting in front of the box watching those flickering two-dimensional images of people pretending to be someone else. And that applies to newsreaders and politicians as much as it does to actors.

This is the most important moment in history to do something for African elephants. Because it's the worst time in history to be an elephant.

In 1980 there were 1.2 million elephants in Africa. Now there are just 430,000 and 20,000 were killed last year alone to fuel soaring demand for ivory. About one every 20 minutes.

That's why The Nature Conservancy has teamed up with music industry icon Martin Guitar on #SaveElephants -- a movement to provide people with simple actions to help elephants that will add up to make a difference.

Martin Guitar has been a leader in elephant protection since the 1970s when the company made the decision to stop using ivory on its guitars and started to phase the material from its supply chain. As the founding sponsor of #SaveElephants, Martin has donated five custom elephant-themed guitars for raising funds.

#SaveElephants is part of a partnership between the Conservancy's programs in Africa and China to increase wildlife security, expand habitat, reduce demand, and reduce poverty and instability in places where elephants range -- the root cause of poaching.

Ultimately, this is bigger than elephants. Poaching spreads crime and instability, threatening lives and tourism-based income that's desperately needed by the people who live among elephants.

We have to do more. That's why we're thrilled to be working with Martin Guitar -- and with you. Together, we're powerful.

Asante sana (thank you very much),

The Masters of the Universe do seem to have a steady stream of interesting stories featuring them, their various friends and relations, and alumni. Each week Graham Inglis keeps us up to date with the latest news from the Hawkverse...

Dismissed by the press at the time, and now all but forgotten by many, we need a reminder of the mind-blowing band who ushered in punk and multimedia raves.

Thus states the intro to an entertaining Guardian article by Joe Banks, who’s recently released a book about Hawkwind.

The article remembers how Hawkwind were treated by the music press of the day. “Hawkwind’s lack of interest in virtuosity irked the music press, who routinely criticised them for ‘bashing their riffs around for several minutes on end with no appreciable textural variation’ (per the NME).”

The book’s description has Joe Banks rejecting the accepted narrative that views the band as one long lysergic soap opera, and repositions Hawkwind as one of the most innovative and culturally significant bands of the 1970s.

Hawkwind: Days of the Underground – Radical Escapism in the Age of Paranoia is published by Strange Attractor Press.

By way of contrast, modern reviewers skew in the opposite direction, praising everything in sight. I don’t think that’s an improvement, necessarily - at least one was on firm and familiar ground when the Establishment music press of the 1970s and 80s slagged Hawkwind off!

Reviews of the mid-October album Carnivorous follow this new trend.

AtTheBarrier describes the start of the album thus:

“Brock’s quirky songwriting is evident and hooks us in immediately. His android love Dyna-mite “knows how to do it right,” so bop along in your space boots and have some fun. An instrumental sonic sound journey over the Void Of Wasteland with all the effects you can shake a light sabre at, merges into an oscillating, hammering Repel Attract which is pure Hawkwind rock at its best."

NoStarUnturned - Ian Abrahams, also the author of a book about Hawkwind, continues the album journey:

"...the album diverts into the spacious synthesisers of 'Void of Wasteland' where Dave’s guitar emerges out of the wash to add vim to this instrumental’s rolling rhythms. 'Human Behaviour (No Sex Allowed)' is a strident siren of a dystopian rocker..."

LouderThanWar:

"Model Farm Blues is a sprawling piece of space rock blues, with more than a touch of Fat White Family, as synths and piano add to the mayhem that will be utterly epic live when they finally get back on the road."

TheAfterword:

"To me, the album’s centrepoint is a 15-minute apocalyptic suite about the current pandemic, an instrumental 'Lockdown', followed by 'The Virus'. I can’t imagine..."

DAYS OF THE UNDERGROUND

RADICAL ESCAPISM IN THE AGE OF PARANOIDa

JOE BANKS
anyone doing something like this better than Hawkwind, the current situation being a very pulp-science fiction scenario of people trapped in their homes viewing reality through telescreens whilst stories circulate as to whether this was a virus jumping from animal to man 'by eating meat and that's a fact' (as their lyric puts it) or is an escapee from some lab with globally grim consequences."

NoStarUnturned (Abrahams):

I'd have cut it there, fading out on those more gentle notes [that play-out 'The Virus'], a fitting coda to a solidly rocking record. I think that would have been a perfect ending. Carnivorous carries on, 'Forgotten Memories', about the tragedy of Alzheimer's, what's noted as the hide and seek of memory, and the melancholic and genuinely emotional 'Higher Ground', both songs with real heart to them, so, you know, absolutely not dismissed in wanting the album to finish on those haunting notes ... but a reflection that they possibly deserved another home, simply to allow a fade of the record on a different note.

I think Abrahams raises an interesting question there, as those last two tracks are the two that I liked best!

And, TheAfterword can have the afterword (s):

"This is a coronavirus album; Dave is at the stage of his life where self-isolation is necessary, and as a veteran of the psychic wars you'd think he'll come through the other side when the rest of us are compost; however, prudence is always sensible: we thought Lemmy was invincible, too. Ensconced in his home studio and seeing the news, his response has been to make a thoughtful album which touches all the right places and shows his sly, wry, and visionary mind is still active in a way few of his contemporaries can match."

DEEP IN THE FOREST SOMETHING STIRs. TWO NOVELS, ONE HORRIFIC SECRET...
Martin Springett was born in Crayford, Kent, England, in 1947. He studied art (that is he learned to play the Guitar) for two semesters at the Brassey School of Art in Hastings, Sussex. He emigrated to the West Coast of Canada in 1965, but returned to the UK in 1973 to pursue music in various bands. He spent time in Germany, and toured through Europe.

While in London Martin started to illustrate and design record covers for Columbia records. Upon his return to Vancouver, Martin carried on with music and illustrated various books and magazines. In 1978 he moved to Toronto, maintaining activity in every area where illustration is required. He released his own album, "The Gardening Club", in 1983.

In 1984 Martin was commissioned to illustrate the cover of "The Summer Tree" by Guy Gavriel Kay. This and the subsequent volumes of The Fionavar Tapestry Trilogy were published around the world along with Martin's covers. Martin continued his work in fantasy illustration, illustrating many covers for fantasy novels, including "The Traveller In Black" by John Brunner. In 1990 he illustrated his first children's book, "Mei Ming and the Dragon's Daughter" written by Lydia Bailey. Martin has just finished illustrating his sixth children's book, called "The Follower" by Richard Thompson. He has been nominated for various awards, including the Governor Generals Award For Illustration. He has won the Aurora Award For Excellence in Fantasy Art, and two Silver Awards from the Art Directors Club of Toronto and Best Classical Record Cover of The Year Award (UK).

Martin still pursues the Musical Muse, recently producing a new CD, "Blue Evening" with his band "FREEFALL", an independent, instrumental album called "Rough Magic"; a collection of explorations on the guitar, and a collection of tunes inspired by the writings of Guy Gavriel Kay called "Bright Weaving".

How much longer this lockdown?
How can we maintain social distance?
We are gregarious creatures
We need to meet/greet/be with each other
Even following CDC Guidelines, this plague continues
Everything has changed - schools, cinemas, cars, restaurants
Too much change makes us conservative
We need respite from anxiety/relief from lack of relief.
To have a Census, then an election, while sports is suspended makes the Colosseums of this Nation empty spectacles.
The tanks of enthusiasm are on EMPTY.
With no income, you want us to spend again?
Still, in the interests of life over death
we will stay home, wear masks, keep apart six feet horizontally rather than six feet vertically. Dig it!
Part gripping memoir, part fascinating account of the ecology of our countryside, Wilding is, above all, an inspiring story of hope. Forced to accept that intensive farming on the heavy clay of their land at Knepp was economically unsustainable, Isabella Tree and her husband Charlie Burrell made a spectacular leap of faith: they decided to step back and let nature take over. Thanks to the introduction of free-roaming cattle, ponies, pigs and deer – proxies of the large animals that once roamed Britain – the 3,500 acre project has seen extraordinary increases in wildlife numbers and diversity in little over a decade. Extremely rare species, including turtle doves, nightingales, peregrine falcons, lesser spotted woodpeckers and purple emperor butterflies, are now breeding at Knepp, and populations of other species are rocketing. The Burrells’ degraded agricultural land has become a functioning ecosystem again, heaving with life – all by itself.

Personal and inspirational, Wilding is an astonishing account of the beauty and strength of nature, when it is given as much freedom as possible.

“This is one of the most impressive natural history books I have read for a long time. For some reason, 2020 is proving to be a bumper year for such things. I was already aware of this book before my dear, adopted nephew, Dr Max Blake, sent it through to me as an unsolicited present, so I knew what to expect. It is...
with their neighbours, who objected vociferously to the well-manicured acres being allowed to turn into scrubland, made me as angry as – no doubt – it did Isabella and her husband. But they dealt with all the brickbats aimed in their direction with well-bred politeness, and eventually managed to prevail against all apparently unsurmountable odds.

Unfortunately, the powers of law and order would not allow them to release wild boar onto their land, nor beavers. The former is particularly annoying, because wild swine are now to be found living in various parts of the United Kingdom, including areas within a stone’s throw of the Knepp estate, and it would seem almost certain that it is only a matter of time before they join their feral brethren there. Beavers are also something which are becoming more and more common in parts of Britain, where they have not been seen for centuries, and the truism that they are an invaluable tool in the fight against flooding is slowly becoming more widely accepted. But, I don’t think anybody who knows me will be surprised to discover that, for me, and I suspect for Max, it is the proliferation of invertebrates once thought lost that it the most important and the most interesting facet of this book. The purple emperor butterfly, for example, often thought of as Britain’s most majestic butterfly species, recolonised this part of Sussex of its own volition, once the Knepp acres were more appropriate for it. And herein lies the other important, and quite possibly the most important, message that this book has to offer.

One thinks of the whole of Great Britain basically the story of how mother nature repairs herself, given half a chance. Isabella Tree and her husband Charlie (Sir Charles Burrell) found themselves facing disaster when the farming industry went spectacularly tits up, over twenty years ago, and they realised that they could no longer intensively farm their family estate. So, they applied for a Stewardship Grant, and restored three hundred and fifty acres of land, which had been under intensive farming methods since World War II.

The restoration of Knepp’s Repton park presented them with the chance to look at the land in a different way.

Further inspired by a visit to the Oostvaardersplassen nature reserve in the Netherlands in 2002 and the work of Dutch ecologist Dr Frans Vera, they set about establishing a ‘hands-off’, naturalistic grazing system across the entire Estate. He used free-roaming herds of old English longhorns, Exmoor ponies and Tamworth pigs as proxies for the aurochs, tarpan and wild boar that would once have roamed the British countryside, as well as red and fallow deer. Headline species include nightingales, white storks, turtle doves and purple emperor butterflies. Knepp now has all five UK species of owls and 13 out of the UK’s 17 species of bats.

I knew most of this already, but to read it in Isabella Tree’s beguiling tone, which pulls one in and makes one feel as if their struggles are your struggles, was an experience for which I was totally unprepared.

To read about the problems they had and Ireland as once having been covered by extensive, closed-canopied, broadleaf forests, and it has been the stated intention of many well-known conservationists, including such counterculture luminaries as Felix Dennis, to restore these forests. But, the work of Isabella Tree and her husband, and the aforementioned Dr Frans Vera, actually suggests that the prehistoric landscape of these islands was much more diverse, and that some species that are usually considered to be animals of the broadleaf closed-canopy forests are actually nothing of the sort. When offered a diverse range of habitats, quite a few species have behaved completely differently to the way that had been hypothesised.

But even this isn’t the most important message. The most important message is the one that I have been spouting on about for years, here and elsewhere:
If we really want to save the planet and ensure our own species survival, there is only one step forward. We must drastically cut down on our consumption of meat and dairy, and we must allow thousands of acres currently used for intensive farming to lie fallow, and to eventually be reclaimed by Mother Nature, to fulfil the role that they have always been intended for: acting as carbon sinks to make sure that the balance of nature is no longer thrown out of kilter by the actions of one single, destructive, species.

And books like this truly give me hope that this may prove not to be a completely unrealistic goal.

And so, dear friends, we come to the end of another issue. Although I will never truly get over her, I am beginning to function reasonably well to a greater or lesser degree for the first time since Corinna's death, two months ago. And so, I am beginning to go back to working on various projects, which I sadly put on hold at the beginning of the summer.

But, looking out at the world around us, it seems ever more chaotic, and I don’t think that anybody can say that they have confidence that our political masters are actually doing anything but running about like headless chickens.

It’s only another three weeks or so until the American election, and I think that one can confidently predict that this is going to prove to be a complete shitstorm. And then Brexit will be implemented, and God alone knows what is going to happen there.

And then, we have the second spike of COVID, which is either going to be a storm in a tea cup or something at least as bad if not worse than the spike which happened earlier in the year.

So, the whole world is rapidly getting stranger and more unpredictable. And remember a year ago, when all we had to worry about was the upcoming climate apocalypse!

I think it would be a very unwise person who makes any concrete predictions about what is going to happen next. Which brings us to this magazine. For the last eight years, I have been saying that we are living in ‘interesting times’ and that it is the job of this magazine to document these times. And I truly think that this is as relevant a statement now than it has ever been. So, wait for each fortnightly issue of this august periodical, and don’t forget to buckle yourselves in securely. It’s going to be a very bumpy ride!
