THE THREE COMMANDMENTS OF GONZO
WEEKLY:

1. Art is as important as science and more important than money

2. There is life after (beyond and before) Pop Idol

3. Music can and sometimes does change the world

If you think those three ideas are stupid then you should probably give up reading this magazine now.
Otherwise... enjoy

Dear friends,

Welcome to yet another issue of this admittedly flawed, but what we continue to believe a really quite insightful, if not delightful, little organ. I have said on a number of occasions, I didn't know what I wanted this magazine to do specifically (although I had a number of broad ideas) and so like the George Harrison song says "if you don't know where you're going, any road will take you there".

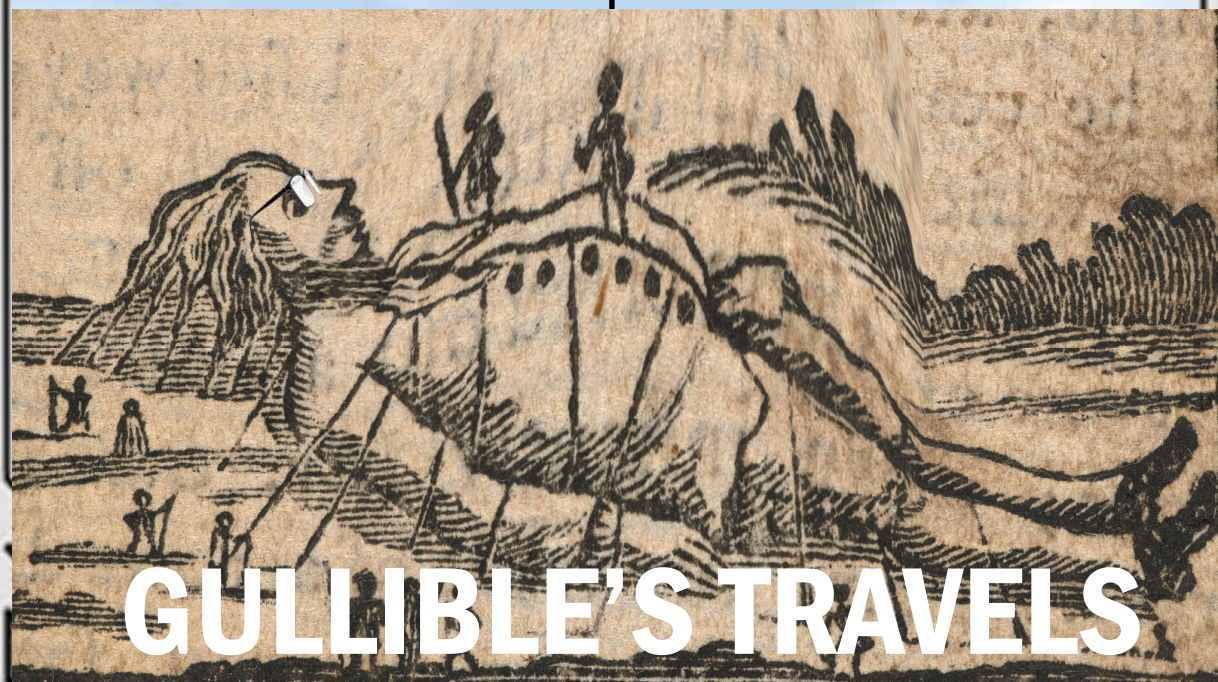

But I am quite pleased with the way that it is evolved over the last 643 issues, and I'm very pleased that we have kept it going for so long, and that we intend to keep it going for at least the foreseeable future.

As always, this week's editorial is mirroring one of the things that just happened to me in my own ongoing journey through life, and the more obscure sectors of popular culture. Since my wife died and I have been being looked after by my old friend and colleague Graham, I usually go to bed much earlier than I did when I was able bodied, and I spend hours each evening pushing around on my iPad, reading books, listening to music, and perusing websites.

And for the last few years, most of the editorials that I've written in this particular space are inspired by things that I have discovered during my evening ramblings.

And something that never ceases to surprise me is that there is so much that passes me by despite the fact that as a long-standing music journalist and book reviewer I am allegedly on the mailing lists of all the people who produce stuff in which I am likely to be interested.

For example, it was only last week that I discovered that Pink Floyd had released a new remix of the 1987 album A Momentary lapse of reason.

In 1987 I was working in a Group Home (see above) as a Team Leader, which is what the powers that be decided to rename Staff Nurses in National Health Service owned group homes, for the people who were still then named the mentally handicapped, in order to make the whole thing seem less institutional.

It didn't really work, merely instituting the framework of one well-established hegemony for another equally well established one. I could have told them that it wasn't going to work, but as a whole bunch of professionals, who were much higher up the foodchain than me, had already said this to them, and had been randomly ignored, I didn't bother.

I was always seen by the powers that be, and my coworkers alike, as a completely out to lunch and quite possibly dangerous influence on the status quo, and I didn't think that anything that I said was ever going to change that.

So, I carried on doing what I always did until they threw me out a couple of years later.

In those days, brothers and sisters, there were still small record shops in every little town as well as in the big cities, and in the pretty little market town in which I was working (Crediton)

There was one shop selling new records and another, with a very silly name, selling secondhand ones, and during the few lunch breaks I actually got, I frequented both of these. And one day in the first half of 1987 I went up the road to the shop selling the new vinyl, and I bought a copy of the new Pink Floyd album. And when I got home that night, I couldn't wait to put it on my turntable.

Now, for years, I pretended that I liked it. But, in fact, I only liked one song. It came over to me as an embarrassingly cynical attempt to make a commercial record with a gloss of Pink Floyd characteristics. As I read more about it, despite the credits on the sleeve, I found out that the only member of the band to be on it consistently was the guitarist David Gilmour.

PINK FLOYD

A Momentary Lapse of Reason

I discovered through the grapevine that drummer Nick Mason was in the process of undergoing some sort of emotional crisis which left him unable to play the drums, and that keyboard player Richard Wright who had been sacked from the band during the 1979 sessions for the double album The Wall was back as a hired hand, but neither Richard or Nick had actually contributed very much to the album. No wonder I didn't like it.

Nick Mason later wrote: "In hindsight, I really should have had the self-belief to play all the drum parts. And in the early days of life after Roger, I think David and I felt that we had to get it right, or we would be slaughtered."

As I said, the only track I liked was a Celtic sounding using on side two called On the Turning away.

In contrast, when I went to the same record shop some weeks later and bought a copy of the Roger Waters album Radio KAOS I loved it, and still do. In fact, I love it more than its creator, and more than the vast majority of Roger Waters fans. In fact, I would go so far as to say that to me it is the highlight of Roger's solo career. But, I am digressing. Back to the Pink Floyd album.

Without making too much of a song and a dance about it, Pink Floyd have re-issued the album in a completely new format. There is what has been described as a "Radical" new remix. I wouldn't go that far, but it is noticeably different. Large chunks of the original drumming that were done by, whoever they were done by (and I am dictating this onto my iPad in the car park at Lidl and I have no access to the Internet so I can't check my facts) have been redone by Nick Mason and the brakes and fills are certainly more authentic Pink Floyd-esque than are the original version. Peculiarly, some of the keyboard bits seem to have been remixed or even re-recorded and certainly sound more like the work of Richard Wright. How they did this I'm not sure, as Richard Wright has been dead to some years. I suspect, although I have no way of proving, and can't be bothered to check any more than stating my suspicions in this editorial, that some bits from the Endless River have been recycled again, and that this was a convenient way of getting more authentic Pink Floyd sounds onto the album. The Endless River is, of course the Mish Mash mostly instrumental album put together by Mason and Gilmour a few years ago from outtakes that were still languishing in the archives.

A Momentary Lapse of Reason

Again, I cannot prove it, or – to be more honest – I could've proven it, but I really can't be arsed - there seems to be a lot more acoustic guitar strummetty strumming on the album, than there was on the original, although this could purely be down to the mix. I don't know, and can't be bothered to find out. But it does change the dynamic of the whole of the album, and change it for good. However, the one thing that it doesn't change is the most of the songs are not very good. Gilmore is a mediocre lyricist, which is why so many of the songs with his tunes and Roger Waters is vicious and bilious lyrics were so successful on an artistic level. And why his more recent songs, written with lyrics by his wife Polly Sampson are so good.

I am afraid I like words. Of course tunes and musicianship are fundamentally important but if the words and the delivery of them is below par then they do not appeal to me. I have always said my favourite band in the world would be ABBA, with Tom Waits providing both the vocals and the lyrics. What a fuck off amazing band that would be.

So how does the new remix affect the position of this album within the canon of Pink Floyd work? The sad answer is that he doesn't really. The new mix is a great improvement on the old, but the songs are still crap, and it still doesn't come over as anything apart from a cynical commercial cash in, and a way to try and underline the ownership of the Pink Floyd name against a far superior concept album by their erstwhile Bass Player.

Sad but true.

I hope that you enjoy this issue. We have certainly enjoyed putting it together, and I will see you in a few weeks time.

Hare bol,

IT'S A LEGAL MATTER BABY

A lot of the time the pictures that we include in this publication are unique to Gonzo Weekly, and used with the photographer's permission. However, this magazine is free, and at least at the moment only available online, and so in our opinion we are covered by a recent decision by the European Courts of Justice.

Websites can link to freely available content without the permission of the copyright holder, the European Court of Justice says. The court's decision came after a dispute in Sweden between journalists and a web company that had posted links on its site to online news articles.

A Swedish court had asked the EU court to consider whether this broke copyright law.

Some of the pictures in this magazine are hotlinked to other websites where they are freely available. It is our opinion that we are covered by this ruling. So there!

Of course if someone objects to our using their material we will be good fellows and take it down, unless (and this is a big unless) we feel that it is not in the public interest to comply.

But normally we shall not stand on ceremony. If you want to read more about this decision go to:

February

ISABEL FLORENDINE

One crisp February evening, Bude came to a standstill. Although as the one and only Johnny Cowling, is his own roadie, he would say that.

We had no clue what we were in for; but what a night!

I'm still laughing now, audience participation or non-audience participation in some cases. Plenty of singalongs, dancing and laughter followed. Johnny is a true entertainer, back in the old style, when Britain was renowned for our comedy.

We all miss Johnny being on the radio but at least he's touring once more. This was a special charity night for the Cornwall Air Ambulance Trust and Bude and District Age

Concern. These two charities are splitting the moneys from the following;

- Auction
- Guess the tees in the jar
- Lucky number game
- Raffle

Thank to everyone involved and making it a special event indeed.

This is quite simply the best magazine you will ever find that is edited by a mad bloke (and his small orange cat), and produced from a tumbledown potato shed on the outskirts of a tiny village that nobody's heard of in North Devon. ## so what's it all about, Alfie?

It is simple; my name is Jon and I'm the editor of the Gonzo Multimedia daily online bloggything, and wot what a long, strange trip it is gonna be...

I keep on thinking that I ought to have some sort of a mission statement in each issue, but it is more than a little difficult to do one.

Basically, (if you don't mind me sounding more like a wishy washy old hippy than my haircut in the photograph on the previous page would imply) I think that books and music are immensely important.

I look around and see that we are living in a world where the things that I think are important are valued less and less by society as a whole; a world where asinine gameshows and so-called reality TV (which is actually a complete oxymoron, but don't get me started) are of more importance to most people than anything of cultural or spiritual value.

I am also very disappointed by much of what the contemporary music press puts out, and I decided many years ago, that probably the only way I could read the things that I want to read, would be to publish them myself.

So this is what I have been doing for much of my life. I am also naive enough to think that music and art can change the world, and as the world is in desperate need of change, I am gonna do my best to help.

Now is an even better time than usual to subscribe because, not only is it FREE (yes, Oxford English Dictionary free, not yer usual publisher free which means that we sell all the mailing list emails that we garner to a company trying to flog Viagra and/or Double Glazing).

No this is FREE as in Gratis. Not a Sausage. But I digress. So make an old hippy a happy chappy and

It is both sad and shameful that when night falls and the setts of southern England stir, their gentle folk will be needlessly slaughtered. That in spite of science and public will, the wrath of ignorance will further bloody and bleed our countryside of its riches of life. That brutalist thugs, liars and frauds will destroy our wildlife and dishonour our nation's reputation as conservationists and animal lovers. I feel sick, sad, disempowered, betrayed, angry and crushed by the corruption of all that I know as right.

And Then There Were Three..., Phil Collins, Tony Banks and Mike Rutherford continued to expand the scope of what the group could achieve. Released as the album's lead single, the classic Follow You Follow Me proved that Genesis could be chart hitmakers, while their performance at Knebworth on 26 June 1978 – headlining the day-long A Midsummer Night's Dream festival, on a bill with Tom Petty And The Heartbreakers, Jefferson Starship and Devo – continued their ascent to arena-filling mega-stardom.

Broadcast on UK TV, the Knebworth show took a trip through Genesis' shape-shifting history to date, including highlights from the Nursery Cryme and Selling England By The Pound albums (The Fountain Of Salmacis, I Know What I Like (In Your Wardrobe)), along with standout moments from the post-Peter Gabriel era (Ripples, A Trick Of The Tail; One For The Vine, Wind & Wuthering) and a healthy serving of songs from their new three-man incarnation, Burning Rope and Follow You Follow Me among them. In just two years, the group would reinvent themselves again, making Knebworth 1978 a fascinating document of a crucial period in Genesis' development.

Pink Floyd - The Animals Tour: Hardcover Edition (Smaller Version)

Hardcover Book

Pink Floyd's 10th studio album "Animals" was released almost 10 years on from their psychedelic debut that launched the band on to the world stage. But this release couldn't be farther from "The Piper At The Gates Of Dawn" if you tried: It was a hard-hitting politically charged heavy rock album. Its three central pieces, "Pigs (Three Different Ones)", "Dogs" and "Sheep" each extending to over 10 minutes each drew parallels with George Orwell's dystopian nightmare "Animal Farm". Its lyrics continued to project Roger Waters' eternal themes of life's struggles where the subservient masses are sheep controlled by tyrannical pigs and authoritarian dogs.

Recorded over the summer of 1976, in the space of time it took punk to both explode and promptly fizzle out, at their own Britannia Row studios in north London, it also marked a shift from their traditional base of EMI at Abbey Road. Arguably one of Pink Floyd's least well recorded works it does however hold a fond place in many fans hearts and Animals has enjoyed a legacy – Roger Waters in particular reviving those tracks to shoehorn into his own politically charged live solo shows in recent years.

GONZO Eclectic & Unique! MULTIMEDIA THE LABEL FOR CONNOISSEURS

The corresponding tour through the first half of 1977 was also not without compromise and built on the stadium spectacular that had been successfully developed over the previous two years of touring. Creatively, there was no limit to their ambition as large-scale inflatable structures, screen films, special effects and state of the art sound reinforcement were utilized that enveloped the audience in an ever-increasing immersive experience. But, despite all this, as their fan base increased exponentially so too did the rowdy nature of the stadium environment which, coupled with band members personal issues, ultimately led to inter-band rifts and Roger Waters' increasing intolerance of and disdain towards the adulation of the fans.

This all finally came to a spectacular head during their final show of the "Animals" tour in Montreal in July and the events that unfolded became the lynchpin of Waters' vision of isolation and madness that eventually led to the creation of "The Wall" two years later.

"Pink Floyd – The Animals Tour – A Visual History" By Glenn Povey documents both the history of the recording of the album and the supporting tours which remains one of the most fascinating periods in Pink Floyd's history.

GORDON GILTRAP STARFIELD

New CD from guitar legend Gordon Giltrap.

Despite facing challenges in the ever-changing music industry, Gordon Giltrap has remained a steadfast figure in the world of acoustic guitar music. His dedication to his craft and his ability to connect with audiences through his music have cemented his status as a beloved and influential artist. In recent years, he has continued to perform, record, and inspire new generations of guitarists. Giltrap's enduring legacy lies not only in his technical mastery but also in his ability to convey profound emotion and storytelling through his instrument, making him a true icon of British guitar music.

The best person to tell you about Gordons new album, Starfield, is the man himself, here it is track by track

- STARFIELD (VOCAL)

I shared a dream about my late wife Hilary with my friend, the poet and song writer Rhona Dickson. She was deeply moved by the story and felt compelled to write some words and a melody line over the top of her favourite Gordon Giltrap tune 'Starfield.' On first hearing I knew there was something deep, special and haunting about it. I had been working with the superb Welsh singer songwriter Susy Wall at the time and asked if she would like to add her lovely voice to the track. The end result is what you are hearing now!

- THE DREAM DODO'S

This version is the work of my friend Paul White. My contribution to the track was to play the acoustic sections, Paul did the rest, adding sonic soundscapes and his soulful blues guitar.

- 12 TOWERS AT DAWN

This track was inspired by the work of the fantasy artist Rodney Matthews and his image '12 Towers At Dawn.' The piece is one of my medieval flavoured tunes that had been around for a while. When my friend, the brilliant Italian progressive rock musician, Alessandro Corvaglia was writing

Molly Tilston with friends

*Alan Dearling
chats with Molly after a great gig at the 3 Wise
Monkeys in Todmorden*

This was an intimate, friendly and crammed gig. Here's how I first heard about her music and

alan dearling

performances. My colleagues at the Narrowboat Sessions told me:

"We just knew that we were on to something special with these Narrowboat Sessions the moment that this young lady started to sing. The charming Molly Tilston is of course the daughter of the superb Steve Tilston and the late great and sorely missed Maggie Boyle, and the evidence that genetics really do come into it is in this beautifully simple song she wrote called 'Dragonfly'."

'Dragonfly':

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=C8JzMHXOcpc>

During the evening, Molly performed alongside what she calls "...the wonderful musicians, my beautiful friends, Vernon Bigsby, Lotte Har, Rick Burrows, Chris Manley and Brian Toberman."

They also performed some of their own songs and a mix of swing and Gypsy jazz.

Indeed, the stage area was filled with musicians and talent... and it was a lively, bustling, Saturday night audience. Molly bared her soul - lots of personal songs about home, homelessness, challenges and new ways of living. Vernon and Lotte kept the evening swinging with Hot Club vibes, and Chris and others performed some of their own songs and accompanied Molly... and jammed on into the night...

Alan: Thanks for taking time to have a chat, Molly. The gig with you and your friends at the 3 Wise Monkeys was really busy and successful. Congrats. I know a little bit about your musical family, partly from Mark Holdsworth, who co-ordinates the Narrowboat Sessions, which raises money for cancer research and which are partly dedicated to the memory of your mother, musician and singer, Maggie Boyle. Tell me a bit about your musical family and growing up. It sounds quite complicated!

Molly: Complicated, beautiful, organised chaos! My happiest childhood memories are the times on the road with my parents and older brother. I utterly adored watching my parents on stage and I was and still am endlessly proud of their music and abilities to connect with people. For me, it was easy and exciting on the road, but integrating with children with more conventional lives was very difficult, and I struggled with education settings. There were often times when my parents left for long periods of time to tour, and I know they found this very difficult. It was not in any way a 'normal' childhood,

MOLLY TILSTON & FRIENDS AN EVENING OF FOLK WITH A LITTLE BIT GYPSY JAZZ

THREE WISE MONKEYS

I was drenched in music and surrounded by colourful and talented people and today I realise how lucky I was. I often think of the times spent in the back of an old banger, next to my brother, listening to Dad's music, driving up a motorway to another venue. These were happy times.

Alan: I have put together quite a few links to your songs and a range of performances and will add them into an article together with this 'conversation'. When did you start recording music, and are there many recordings with your family members including your sister, Martha, and brother, Joe?

Molly: I always sang, I knew every word to every song my parents performed probably by the age of 5, yet I still claimed that I would never be a folk singer. I started to drop out of school around the age of 13, I was definitely being pulled towards music. By the age of 16 I had a bunch of songs, and I started to perform, and I recorded in my bedroom. Unfortunately, there is not much out there of us together, Joe has recorded a song of mine, I am on some of Martha's albums, and we have recorded bits together, but for our own enjoyment and not to be released.

Alan: You must have been pretty shell-shocked with your mum's cancer diagnosis. I think you wrote 'I am a Woman Now' to prove to her that you were resilient.

Molly: We were all utterly devastated, my brother and I were utterly heartbroken for a very long time, such is life. Mum was the glue that held us together, the life and soul of our existence, and we had a huge fight on our hands trying to keep her with us. Mum worried about me a lot. I'd had my struggles and at the time of her passing, I had a young daughter. It brought her comfort when I reassured her that I was going to be OK, it made sense to tell her in a song.

Alan: At the time of her passing in 2014, you were playing with, and I think recording an album with Lee Southall from The Coral. Has that album been finished and released? Any other releases apart from songs recorded for the Narrowboat Sessions?

Molly: Lee and I had the opportunity to record our debut album at Peter Gabriel's Realworld Studios. We spent 2 weeks recording on reel-to-reel, we worked with some top musicians. The album is incredible, and my best work to date, we were prolific with our writing and musically worked very well together. Unfortunately, I was going through some very tricky circumstances in my personal life, I think losing mum triggered a breakdown. Myself and Lee separated and the album was never released. I still to this day push for its release.

Alan: At the recent gig you shared a lot of your own challenges and issues with the audience. You put a lot of emphasis on 'home', 'homelessness', 'where you will sleep' and 'put your head tonight'. And you said that you were finding 'new ways of living'. How's that all going?

Molly: Music is therapy to me, I like to be brutally honest with in my songs, I have to write about my traumatic experiences to heal. It is much harder to write happy songs, you know!? I like to talk about my struggles, my struggles with alcoholism, relationships and beyond, as I find most people have had similar experiences and it's a good way to connect with my audience. My children and I became homeless last year, through a 'No fault Eviction', we ended up in temporary accommodation, this was a life-changing experience and one I am grateful to be at the other side of.

Alan: At times you remind me a bit of Melanie, who I saw first at the Isle of Wight Festival. There is a shared feeling about facing darkness and finding redemption. She was also keen to shed the label of 'folkie' – which you make something of an issue.

Molly: I just never wanted to be pigeon-holed into the folk scene. I am inspired by so much more than just folk music, although I am very proud of my folk heritage.

Alan: I came away from the gig with a positive vibe, about your performance, and your new songs. You also seem very energised by your daughter...are your plans working out?

Molly: That makes me very happy! I am very happy with how things are going at the minute - I have a wonderful band, and we are looking forward to more gigs and recording the new material over the next few months.

Alan: Are you planning any more gigs or recordings with your family members?

Molly: We are rather spontaneous, we never really plan to gig together, it just happens if we are in the vicinity of each other.

Alan: So, what else can you tell me about 'what comes next' in your musical life? More gigs with friends?

Molly: I am ready to record my debut solo album, more than ready, and I am planning to go in the studio this month.

Alan: Thanks again for the chance to chat.

Molly: Thank you so much, hope to see you again!

KEV'S WORLD

LUNAR MISTAKE LUNAR MISTAKE INDEPENDENT

Somehow I came across the band Lunar Mistake and when I asked them for more information I was sent this, "Lunar Mistake is a prog/post-punk/new wave band from Oakland. It features long-time members of the Bay Area music scene, including Matt Lebofsky (Secret Chiefs 3, miRthkon, MoeTar) on keyboards, Steve Lew (New Zombies, Eskimo, Ebola Soup) on bass, David Shamrock (Sleepytime Gorilla Museum, Free Salamander Exhibit, Slombis) on drums, Drew Wheeler (Free Salamander Exhibit, Young Has Beens) on guitar, and Jackie Wheeler on vocals and percussion. Points of reference may include: Devo, Thinking Plague, Danny Elfman, Rush." The more observant of you may have seen a couple of musical genres listed which surely could only mean one thing, and you would be right, as here is a pronk band which Tim Smith would surely be proud of. I cannot believe I don't see a mention of Cardiacs in their influences (is it really more than a quarter of a century since 'Sing To God'?) as here is a band who have taken pronk and run with it to make something which is RIO, Avant, yet somehow commercial at the same time.

Jackie may not have a great deal of experience in bands but she is happy with everything the band is throwing at her, whether it is the Devo-style punk of "Infinite Loop" or the more comical "Fishies". This is a load of fun which could have come from the stable of either Cardiacs or Poisoned Electrick head and is a blast of punk prog fun which is so very different indeed to what is in the current scene where prog often seems to be quite involved at gazing at one's navel. What we have here is a band producing music which was underground thirty years, and now is even more so as they are so very different indeed, yet their jagged angular melodies and guitar riffs are literally music to my ears.

I knew absolutely nothing about this band when I agreed to review them, just that I thought that artwork was cool and interesting so why not? From the wooded realms of Northern Maine, Manic Abraxas comprise drummer Tom Bennett, bassist/vocalist/synth player Justin Hamm, and guitarist/vocalist/synth player Dallas Seger and they formed the band back in 2012. This is their fourth album, and demonstrates their love of the darker sides of and metal as they take inspiration from the likes of Celtic Frost, early High On Fire, and Uneathly Trance. This is raw underground metal which brings together the likes of doom and black metal with stoner and punk which is all then thrown together with a solid dose of NWOBHM.

It is raw, unadulterated, and will be appreciated by those who prefer their music to be crusty and in your face with aggression and attitude at least as important as melody and performance. I can imagine their gigs are sweaty and insane with numerous walls of death and pits, and in that environment their music will be quite good fun, but whether one wants to sit and listen to this 8-track 37-minute-long album is something else altogether. For me there is too much punk attitude and bite, and not enough in terms of songs and melody for em to stay consistently interested but undoubtedly there is a market out there and if this is your thing then it is available on Bandcamp.

MATT PANAYIDES TRIO WITH EYES CLOSED
PACIFIC COAST JAZZ

On this album guitarist Matt Panayides is joined by bassist Steve LaSpina and drummer Anthony Pinciotti, and they take on eight songs by six jazz composers (including two apiece by Cedar Walton and Wayne Shorter) plus reinvented versions of three standards. There is close interplay between the three musicians and while Panayides is very much the leader he also gives plenty of solo space to both LaSpina and Pinciotti so all three musicians have plenty of room to shine. The result is post-bop jazz which is inventive and interesting as everyone works around the melodies but brings them to nice conclusions. Panayides has a very fluid style, so much so that his playing is often more like liquid than individual notes, yet the other two are always right there with him to provide the correct support.

There are many styles taken onboard as the trio work through the likes of Frank Foster's jazz waltz "Simone," there is a powerful take on Chick Corea's "Straight Up And Down," Cedar Walton's "Hindsight," a tasteful yet passionate revival of Wayne Shorter's "Nefertiti," and Joe Henderson's "Serenity." Cedar Walton's "Mode For Joe" swings hard, as does Shorter's "Ju Ju" and Woody Shaw's "Moon Trane." "I Fall In Love Too Easily" is given an imaginative re-harmonization, "Moon River" is reinvented as an introspective unaccompanied guitar showcase where Panayides takes a long time to get to the main melody, so much so that one may well not recognise it when it commences, and it is only as time progresses that it becomes more apparent. If you enjoy jazz lead guitar then this is worth investigating further.

MOTHER MALLARD MAKE WAY
CUNEIFORM RECORDS

The full name of the band is Mother Mallard's Portable Masterpiece Co. / David Borden while the album is ‘Make Way For Mother Mallard: 50 Years Of Music’, and as one may surmise from the title is a celebration of a band’s 50th anniversary. American composer and musician David Borden helped pave the way for electronic music – via both analogue synthesizers and digital instruments – by forming the world’s first ever synthesizer ensemble in Bob Moog’s Trumansburg studio, using Moog’s prototypes and finding a way of enabling them to be used in performance.

He then later founded and headed Cornell University’s Digital Music Department. This 2- disc set features one disc of early (1970’s) and one disc of recent (2019) Mother Mallard performances of several key Borden pieces.

The first two songs on this set, “Endocrine Dot Patterns” (15:30) and “C-A-G-E I” (32:10) feature the earliest full line-up of the band, with David Borden and Steve Drews being joined by Linda Fisher following the duo’s early concerts when they realised they were limited at just how much they could play due to a lack of hands.

They had commenced by performing works by the likes of Robert Ashley, Morton Feldman, Daniel Lentz, Jon Hassell, Terry Riley, John Cage, Philip Glass and Steve Reich, but as time progressed their own compositions took precedent and for me the one which really stands out for me on this release is “C-A-G-E I” which is incredibly hypnotic and following a similar path to what would be experienced with Tangerine Dream who had much more musical success.

The repeated melodies and changing layers make for a complex arrangement which is quite dangerous to play when listening to in the car as it really does take hold of one’s consciousness as all that exists are the notes, and the music is all-encompassing. This is the first time I have come across Mother Mallard’s Portable Masterpiece Co. who appear to be one of those bands whose influence has been much larger than their recorded output, with their debut only coming out in 1973, yet there is no doubt that Borden’s work with Robert Moog had a huge impact on the world of synthesizers.

PIAH MAER
UNDER THE SHADOW OF A
FOREIGN SUN
CODE666

Formed in 2010 by guitarists Luiz Felipe Netto and Igor Meira, the group sought to conjure the introspective yet grandiose nature which can be found in the work of artists like Ihsahn, Opeth and Enslaved and there is no doubt that on their third album they are still working very much in that vein. After a brief stint as a trio in 2018 when they brought in a full-time drummer with whom they recorded their last album, they have gone back to being a duo with Netto providing vocals, guitars, keyboards and Meira guitars, bringing in a host of other musicians to assist them in fulfilling their vision.

A special callout should go to Tony Lindgren (Leprous, Amorphis, Enslaved) as he mastered this and turned fully understood the brief.

As with their major influences, one is never sure quite where Piah Mater are going to go as some of the music is very dark and Black Metal in its approach, while others are far lighter (and indeed closing number "Canicula" commences as Brazilian folk music, sung in Portuguese), which is certainly very different indeed to the likes of "Follow Garden" which is quite Ihsahn in its attack.

They can be incredibly brutal, with harshness and atmosphere, yet there is always a polish and shining light somewhere within the darkness which ensures the drama is always close at hand.

The switch between gruff and sung vocals is especially powerful and poignant as they also bring in keyboards to provide depth as they move more into Fleshgod Apocalypse territory. Then in the middle of the album we have a nice interlude with "Macaw's Lament", a nice fingerpicking exercise which certainly does not normally belong on an album which contains such ferocity but here it is very poignant indeed.

There is a great deal of depth on this release, with one never knowing quite where it is going to lead the listener, but the joy is in the journey. Well worth discovering.

This is the most important moment in history to do something for African elephants. Because it's the worst time in history to be an elephant.

In 1980 there were 1.2 million elephants in Africa. Now there are just 430,000 and 20,000 were killed last year alone to fuel soaring demand for ivory. About one every 20 minutes.

That's why The Nature Conservancy has teamed up with music industry icon Martin Guitar on #SaveElephants-- a movement to provide people with simple actions to help elephants that will add up to make a difference.

Martin Guitar has been a leader in elephant protection since the 1970s when the company made the decision to stop using ivory on its guitars and started to phase the material from its supply chain. As the founding sponsor of #SaveElephants, Martin has donated five custom elephant-themed guitars for raising funds.

#SaveElephants is part of a partnership between the Conservancy's programs in Africa and China to increase wildlife security, expand habitat, reduce demand, and reduce poverty and instability in places where elephants range-- the root cause of poaching.

Ultimately, this is bigger than elephants. Poaching spreads crime and instability, threatening lives and tourism-based income that's desperately needed by the people who live among elephants.

We have to do more. That's why we're thrilled to be working with Martin Guitar-- and with you. Together, we're powerful.

Asante sana (thank you very much).

NEWS FROM THE POTTING SHED

Martin Springett was born in Crayford, Kent, England, in 1947. He studied art (that is he learned to play the Guitar) for two semesters at the Brassey School of Art in Hastings, Sussex. He emigrated to the West Coast of Canada in 1965, but returned to the UK in 1973 to pursue music in various bands. He spent time in Germany, and toured through Europe.

While in London Martin started to illustrate and design record covers for Columbia records. Upon his return to Vancouver, Martin carried on with music and illustrated various books and magazines. In 1978 he moved to Toronto, maintaining activity in every area where illustration is required. He released his own album, "The Gardening Club", in 1983.

In 1984 Martin was commissioned to illustrate the cover of "The Summer Tree" by Guy Gavriel Kay. This and the subsequent volumes of The Fionavar Tapestry Trilogy were published around the world along with Martin's covers. Martin continued his work in fantasy illustration, illustrating many covers for fantasy novels, including "The Traveller In Black" by John Brunner. In 1990 he illustrated his first children's book, "Mei Ming and the Dragon's Daughter" written by Lydia Bailey. Martin has just finished illustrating his sixth children's book, called "The Follower" by Richard Thompson. He has been nominated for various awards, including the Governor General's Award For Illustration. He has won the Aurora Award For Excellence in Fantasy Art, and two Silver Awards from the Art Directors Club of Toronto and Best Classical Record Cover of The Year Award (UK).

Thom the World Poet

Rob Ayling writes:

"Thom the World poet is an old mate of mine from way back in my history. Even pre-dating Voiceprint, when I was running "Otter Songs" and Tom's poetry tapes and guest appearances with Daavid Allen, Gilli Smyth Mother Gong are well known and highly regarded. It just felt right to include a daily poem from Thom on our Gonzo blog and when I approached him to do so, he replied with in seconds!!! Thom is a great talent and just wants to spread poetry, light and positive energy across the globe. If we at Gonzo can help him do that - why not? why not indeed!!!"

BUT MY WOUNDS CANNOT BEAR WATERS

Even if it is Austin Holy Spring Water
So i meditate on sunshine,water,trees,Austin
All that is green and growing,alive and fresh and New as this New Baby foundling on our doorstep morning.
Our Mexican neighbors have stopped singing
They dispersed before Border Patrol or Noise Complaints APD Stepped into Sanctuary City South Austin.
I meditate upon Diversity,Equity,Inclusion-the 49 UT staff sacked,69 arrestedat Pro-Palestinian gatherings, and the lack of diversity in the incoming Cabinet.
Florida Billionaires do not represent Unsheltered Austinites.
"To be poor is a crime,when the rich own the law"
Lawfare is being waged upon our most vulnerable
Also warfare upon the poorest starving Nations-
Gaza,Yemen,Sudan,Somalia,Syria,Lebanon
Some blood has spilled into this Blessed sunshiney day.
BLESSED WE FORGET!
It is harder-being colorfilled-brown,black,yellow-just like water
Is sunshine a sedative?
See you at our Sacred Springs!
FLOW!

A Visual History of Apple Records

By Nigel Pearce

*Inside
No.3*

Deluxe box, hardback, and softback editions

When you open this beautiful book, you will enter a world that millions of people never knew existed. It's a world of colour, innovation, revolution, coupled with a completely fresh and different mode of marketing from Apple Records, the label owned by The Beatles.

Savile Row was the epicentre of this world, nestling in a sumptuous Georgian Terrace in London's West End commercial belt. No.3 Savile Row is where it all happened in a way beyond belief operation that still inspires artists from all walks and ages of music and life. This book shows a very personal collection, carefully obtained and collated since 1968 that defies description, and has the ability to astound all who care to enter this lost and much sought-after world.

Memos, records, press statements, photographs, albums and so much more. This private collection so carefully assembled, cared for since 1968 has been expertly photographed in full detail to bring this beautiful and innovating world to you, as a tribute and recognition of The Beatles, the world's greatest ever group, and the ever-growing legacy that still astounds fans and historians the world over. It's a record of love, devotion and a longing for all fans, that need wait no more to see this remarkable and stunning world. It shows what went on behind that famous door Inside No.3.

And so another issue is ready to be cast upon the stormy and rather murky waters of our combined consciousness. We have made a paper boat which will soon be launched upon the lake, which is our combined noosphere. At the risk of sounding too much like an old hippie, but I have been editing this magazine for 12 years now so go figure, I truly believe that the active creation is a magickal act and that in its own little way, what is written in these pages does affect the combined consciousness of all who sail upon that conceptual lake.

I am a scientist and I am an artist, but I also strive to be a magickian. Because, after all, magick is only the idiot bastard son of science and art. And in their own way, every Artist, and every scientist, and everyone who creates anything is a sort of magickian.

In the last two weeks, I have had so many of my American friends, and even more so my English friends who live in America, telephone me terrified about what the future holds for them. Long-term readers will remember that back during the dark days When COVID-19 ravaged the western world, I wrote a regular column of dispatches from the plague year; A year which actually lasted 2 1/2 years and saw my life change in an immeasurable fashion, and beyond recognition.

As the world goes through unprecedented changes, I am very tempted to start up another such feature in the magazine. What do you think?
